CHARACTER DELINEATED FROM HANDWRITING
BY AN EXPERT IN THE
"WEEKLY IRISH TIMES."

THE WEEK IN THE GARDEN

Late Planting : Stakes and Ties : The Vegetable Garden : Broccoli, Cauliflower and Tomatoes : Greenhouse Plants : The Garden Hose : Disbudding : Preparing for the Shows : Shade Plants

THE backward state of all plant life is still pronounced, and the recent cold weather has left flowers and vegetables with that hard colour which one associates with unthrifty plants. Under the circumstances a little fertiliser will have a very good effect, and there are many suitable plant foods on the market. For those who prefer to make their own mixtures, it should be remembered that when the weather is cold and dull a little extra nitrogen in the shape of nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia will have a good effect. Rose trees, and, indeed, trees and shrubs generally, will also be the better for a little fertiliser, but calcifuge plants—those that object to lime—should only be treated by an expert. Fuchsias, azaleas and rhododendrons are among common shrubs that can easily be injured by lime in very small quantities, even when applied in a mixed fertiliser, and shrubs like Begonia Fuchsioides are easily killed outright by injudicious attempts to aid them.

Canes and Raffia

Every gardener should keep in stock, in addition to his pots, seed pans, fertiliser and insecticides, an adequate supply of canes and raffia. Both materials are cheap, and, without them, it is impossible to keep a garden tidy or fully productive. Branches are, of course, all right for Peas, and netting or netted wire for vigorous climbers; but Tomatoes and flowering plants should be tied up neatly to single canes, leaving as little as possible of the canes visible. Green raffia is less obtrusive than white where a really neat job is to be done.

Still Planting Time

The seedsmen and nurseries are still offering many varieties of plants for late summer and autumn flowering, and gardeners need have no fear that it is too late to get the most out of them. Indeed, it is probable that plants put in now will overtake those sown much earlier, if the weather behaves itself, and plants generally are coming stronger, and, with good foliage, from the nursery beds, though at this time last year they would have been gone "leggy." Carnations, Begonias, Asters, Marigolds, Lobelia, Phlox, Antirrhinums, Chrysanthemums and Dahlias that we have seen on offer look remarkably well, and if planted now should pick up immediately. Without having what is humorously termed "the green hand," a great deal of planting and transplanting can be done successfully any month in the year if the plants are handled carefully and put in when weather and soil are most favourable. For lawn work now the best seed mixture available should be procured, so that the finer grasses will get away immediately without over-crowding by the coarser plants.

Watering

There has been little need of watering so far, but the weather prophets indicate a long, dry period, and, if this comes, vegetables and flowers will probably require a great deal of water to keep them thrifty. In these conditions a watering-can is little more than a nuisance and the gardener should get a few yards of hose and a Corporation licence to use it. A fountain nozzle costs a very small sum, and when attached to the hose keeps spinning and watering the plants within a considerable radius, and in this way the maximum growth is maintained in hot weather.

A BUSY WEEK-END

This coming week will be a busy one for gardeners. There is still a great deal of planting-out to do, and vegetables and flowers are clamouring for attention.

Greenhouses, too, will want looking after, and there is the perpetual business of fighting weeds and insects and other pests. Even the comparatively simple matter of watering growing plants will be more troublesome by reason of the exceptional weather. Still, the time for planting out flowers for this summer's display is waning quickly, and all interested should look up the seeds, plants and appliances on offer, and prepare for a busy week-end with the "Irish Times" Garden Expert, whose articles appear every Saturday.

Vegetable Garden

Tomato plants may still be put out in the open with every prospect of success, and Broccoli, Cabbage, Cauliflowers, Leeks, Celery and Brussels Sprouts are still in order and supplies are remarkably good (for the year) and cheap. For the small garden a great deal of stuff can be planted between the early Potato drills, and when the Potatoes are lifted the plants will be moulded up. Another intercrop can then be placed in the empty drill. Cabbage or Sprouts lifted from the garden seed bed and sowed this way before the end of June do remarkably well, suffering little check and finding the ground rich, clean and friable.

Strawberry Plots

For the last couple of years particularly there has been a great deal of Strawberry disease in one form or another, and a close watch should be kept for any trouble. The first step in all these matters is absolute cleanliness, and this consists in removing and burning dead leaves, or leaves that show sign of spot or mould, as well as weeds. It has been established that at least one virulent disease is communicated to the berries by the rain sending up little spurts from infected soil, and a straw mulching has been found to be an effective preventive. In laying down Strawberry plots native stocks should be used, no matter how attractive foreign offers may appear.

Shade Plants

The shady patch is the bane of the amateur gardener, and, when all beside is gay with flowers, the bare and colourless spot beneath the trees is annoying. But the shaded spot can be made most attractive, but not by putting down flowering plants at haphazard. Most flowers will not grow in the shade, but, fortunately, those that do make an effective show. If the situation is northern, the Scottish Flame Flower (Tropæolum Speciosum) will give plenty of colour, and plants like Ivy and Vinca are also useful. Flowers suitable for such conditions include Nigella, Godetia, Sweet Alyssum, Asperula, Jacobea, Love-lies-bleeding and the night-scented Tobacco Plant. In spring and early summer a good show of the Scillas, including a number of new varieties, and, of course, wild Hyacinths, may easily be achieved.

Roses and Sweet Peas

Those who intend exhibiting Roses or Sweet Peas should now pay particular attention to the plants. Where the very finest flowers are required, only one or two should be allowed to remain, the others being removed. The earlier this disbudding is done the better, for the production of the flower is a costly effort of the plant, and, if those not required are allowed to reach any considerable stage of development, not only will a considerable quantity of nutrient have been wasted, but certain tendencies will have been set up which will militate against the production of a very good flower in those that remain. Special artificial manures for Sweet Peas are on sale at all seed stores, or a little weak liquid manure may be used. Some care is required in the matter of feeding exhibition plants, and many successful exhibitors grow their stock in well manured ground, and give artificials only a week or ten days before the show. The cold season checked the first early appearance of the Green Fly, and if subsequent attacks are dealt with early there should be little trouble from them as far as roses are concerned.

The Greenhouse

This is the beginning of the difficult time in the greenhouse, except for those fortunate people who have different houses for different plants. By and large, the management is a matter of common-sense, but there are a couple of points worth remembering, particularly for the amateur. Where the plants are not in bloom and making foliage the air must be kept mildly humid, while if the majority are in flower they will look brighter and be less subject to disease and pests in a drier air. Temporary curtains may be made of cheap tiffany, or some similar substance, and will keep off a too bright sun, or a wash may be made or bought, and will cost very little. Pelargoniums of various kinds and Cinerarias, Begonias, etc., will give plenty of colour, and, indeed, there is an almost infinite variety of greenhouse plants that are now in flower. The glass pots are particularly attractive for a conservatory or for house plants, and we would strongly advise their use. Enough use is not made of such plants as Coleus, Canna, Fuchsias, Balsamms, Nepetus and Cacti for inside work, though the plants can be bought cheaply and grown quite easily.

To kill cub worms and hard slugs, 1lb. of Paris green mixed with 30lb. of damp bran is the most effective preparation. It is, however, poisonous.

A little milk added to the water used to clean the fronds of palms, cliveas, etc., gives them a good gloss, and acts as an insecticide.

If you trim Laburnums, remember that all parts of the tree are poisonous to animals and humans.

Frequently spray the foliage, blooms and young pods of beans and peas, and they will bear better crops.

DRILLING IN DUBLIN

PRISONERS MOCK TRIBUNAL

NINE NAMELESS MEN SENTENCED

TWELVE men, nine of whose names were unknown, and who were called by numbers, were charged before the Military Tribunal yesterday with membership of an unlawful association, with unlawfully practising training and drilling in the performance of military acts, and with meeting in an assembly for the purpose of training in military exercises.

They were sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment on the first charge and six months' on each of the other two charges, the sentences to run concurrently.

The charges were a sequel to the police swoop on a number of men who were drilling in a field in the Finglas district on May 10th last.

The names of three of the prisoners were—Philip Christie, McKee avenue, Finglas; Liam Looney, Reilly's Bridge, Cabra, and Joseph Brady, 33 Upper Rutland street, Dublin. The others were known as Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 13.

When asked to plead to the charges, all the prisoners refused to recognise the authority of the Court, referring to the Tribunal variously as an "imperialistic farce," a "so-called court" and a "British court." Throughout the proceedings Looney spoke in Irish.

Mr. J. A. McCarthy, K.C. (instructed by Mr. J. S. O'Connor), prosecuted.

Detective Sergeant Cruise was about to give evidence when one of the defendants said: "Don't be blushing. Now for the lies."

MILITARY ORDERS

Sergeant Cruise said that while on the road at Finglas he heard orders such as: "About turn" and "Right turn." About two hundred yards from the road he noticed nine men drilling, with a small man directing operations and two others supervising. The Civic Guards searched the men, and while waiting for two lorries another man entered the field, but he gave no name, although the prisoners recognised him. Witness could get only the names of Christie, Looney and Brady. The men were again searched in the Bridewell, and papers were found on at least five of them. An envelope was found on Brady, and in this way his identity was revealed.

When asked if they wanted to put any questions to the witness, one of the defendants said that they were "fed up" listening to him.

Looney said that it would be more just to prefer the charges against the people in front of them. Were they not ashamed to take part in such a farce for a little group of politicians, who would not last long in power?

Detective Officer Clarke said that he searched No. 1 prisoner and found documents on him. When he went to Ballygaule House at Finglas he heard voices, and he crossed two fields and saw twelve men there, nine of whom were drilling. One man entered the field later and gave himself up.

At this latter remark the prisoners burst into laughter.

Detective Officer Doyle handed in papers found on prisoners 2, 3 and 4.

Prisoner—I'd like to tell that —— what he is. He did not search No. 4.

Detective Sergeant Cruise, when recalled to the witness box, was asked by one of the prisoners if he had been authorised at any time to carry documents when a member of the Republican Army, and if he had been arrested and interrogated.

PRISONERS JEST

The witness replied that he had.

"This shows the hypocrisy of the whole thing. He did the very same thing himself," declared the prisoner.

"Ah, he is only a child," observed another prisoner.

Asked by the President if they had anything to say, one of the men in the dock said "your time is coming"; another shouted, "There is a parcel for all of you, and there is a tommy gun in every parcel"; yet another informed the Court that the "Free State was being knocked off its foundation stone of blood, mockery and corruption." "I wish," said a fourth prisoner, "you would get on with the farce and finish it, and not have us standing here."

When the sentences were announced, the prisoners cheered loudly, shouting—"Remember Ballyseedy," "Up the Dublin Brigade," "Remember the 77.' They were removed, singing and shouting.

RATHMINES MURDER

INQUEST ON VICTIM

The inquest into the death of Mrs. Florence Byrne, who was found dead in the kitchen of her home at 8 Wynnefield road, Rathmines, on Wednesday evening, was opened and adjourned by Dr. J. P. Brennan, Coroner for South County Dublin, and a jury, at Londonbridge Morgue, Dublin, yesterday.

Joseph Egan, aged 61 years, described as a journeyman blacksmith, of Tullamore, Offaly, who was a lodger in the house, has been remanded at Dublin District Court on a charge of murder, and, medical evidence having been heard at the inquest, the Coroner adjourned the proceedings indefinitely and discharged the jury.

Nicholas J Byrne, who identified the body, said that he last saw his wife alive at about 11.30 on Wednesday morning, when she was standing behind the counter. She was always a strong, healthy woman, he said.

Dr. J. P. O'Connor assistant State pathologist, said that at 4.40 p.m. on Wednesday he examined the body of Mrs. Byrne, who had then been dead only a few hours. There was a gaping wound in the centre of the forehead and a circular contused mark on the right side of the forehead, showing a depressed fracture of the skull bone. There was also a deep wound, six inches long, in the neck, and on the back of the head there was another deep irregular wound. He was of opinion that the wound in the throat was inflicetd after the head wound and that the woman had been dead when her throat was cut.

Dr. J. McGrath, State pathologist, said that there were the "tails" of two cuts on her throat, and two cuts were also evident on the back-bone, indicating two strokes of the knife. There were no other signs of violence on the body. Under the wound at the back of the head was a fissure fracture of the skull.

Dr. McGrath was of opinion that death had been due to shock and had followed almost immediately after the wound on the forehead. He had been shown the hammer and the knife which were found beside the body, and he believed that they would be readily capable of causing the wounds.

Mr. W. O'B. Fitzgerald (instructed by Messrs. Little and Cullen, solicitors) appeared for the next-of-kin, and Superintendent Cuddihy represented the Guards.

EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGE

CLAREMAN'S BAIL INCREASED

At Broadford District Court, William F. Lynch, sub-postmaster, O'Callaghan's Mills, County Clare, was charged with embezzling £415 received for the Minister for Posts and Telegraphs.

Superintendent O'Sullivan applied for a remand for a month, and asked that the present bail, £500 and two sureties of £250 each, be increased to double the amount.

District Justice Gleeson inquired was £415 the total amount involved.

"No," replied Superintendent O'Sullivan; "the £415 relates to one Savings Bank depositor, and forms the subject of one charge. The file goes back to 1912—twenty-four years."

The application was granted, and the bails increased to £1,000 and two sureties of £500 each.

EGG-LAYING TEST

WYANDOTTES STILL LEAD

REPORT FOR EIGHTH PERIOD

THE eighth report issued by the Department of Agriculture in connection with the current egg-laying test at the Munster Institute, Cork, covers the period from 4th October to 14th May. It states that during the eighth period of four weeks the general health of the majority of the birds was satisfactory. Broodiness was more prevalent, and, on this account, the egg-yield was slightly lower than that for the previous four weeks.

Excluding eggs which were under the weight prescribed for second grade, and making allowance for the death of twenty-four pullets since the commencement of the test, the average egg-yield per pullet for each of the competing breeds was as follows:

Breed.	Eighth Period (Apr. 17-May 14)	Thirty-two weeks (Oct. 4-May 14)
White Wyandotte ...	18.7	140.9
Rhode Island Red ...	19.4	133.1
White Leghorn	21.1	128.9
Barred Rock	19.2	113.9
Buff Rock	17.6	140.7
Light Sussex	19.5	139.4
	19.2	135.1

The pen of White Wyandottes owned by Miss B. Quain, Anglesboro', Mitchelstown, County Cork, still leads with a score of 1,024 eggs, value £6 6s. 8d.

AWARDS FOR BRAVERY

PRESENTATIONS TO BE MADE BY LORD MAYOR

Among the business of the Dublin City Council at its meeting next Monday will be the presentations by the Lord Mayor, from the Royal Humane Society, of awards for bravery to Richard Fox for having gallantly rescued a woman from drowning in the River Liffey; to Thomas Ward for rescuing a man from drowning; to Michael Nugent for rescuing a boy from drowning; to Patrick Quinlan for rescuing a child from drowning; to Nicholas Fannin for rescuing a child from drowning; to Guard Patrick McCormack for assisting in rescuing a man from drowning, and to Private Edward T. Brennan, 15th Infantry Battalion, I.F.S.A., for having on September 29th, 1934, assisted in rescuing a man from drowning—all these rescues were from the River Liffey.

Councillor J I Byrne, B.A., has given notice that he will move: "That, in view of the serious position of unemployment prevailing in the city, the Government be requested to proceed forthwith with the Lagoon scheme, Dollymount, towards which the Corporation has already offered to contribute £75,000, which will provide the sum of £150,000 for labour alone."

The question of the appointment of City Manager in place of Mr. Gerald J. Sherlock, who is retiring from that office, will come up for consideration on the report of the General Purposes Committee. The salary will be fixed by the Minister for Local Government.

A recommendation will be submitted by the Town Planning Committee that Little Mary street be widened to a minimum width of fifty feet. Twelve working-class families, consisting of fifty-three persons, occupying tenement rooms over the shops in Little Mary street, will be dispossessed if the scheme, which will cost about £24,000, be carried out.

DUBLIN DISTRICT COURT.

SAILORS FINED

(BEFORE MR. HANNAN.)

Two Bristol seamen belonging to the s.s. British Ardnoa—John Frederick French and Stephen Percival Barling, both of Guinea street, Redcliffe, Bristol—were charged with taking possession of a motor car without the consent of the owner, Miss Teresa Moran, East Arran street, Dublin, and other counts. The charge of taking possession was dismissed, but they were each fined £2 for getting into a car at Lower Abbey street, Dublin, on Thursday night; also 2s. 6d. each for causing damage to the car, and ordered to pay 2s. 6d. each compensation to the car owner.

BETTING CHARGES

Thomas Mullins, Devoy road, Inchicore; Edward Mooney, St. Thomas's road, Fairbrothers' Fields, and Simon Ruttledge, Thomas street, Dublin, were returned for trial, charged with conspiracy and with attempting to obtain from various bookmakers in Dublin sums of money by placing with them bets on horses running at Naas Races on April 25th, they having received telephone messages that the horses had won.

Mr. J. A. Geary (Chief State Solicitor's Office) prosecuted. Mr. J. J. O'Connor was for the defendants, and Detective Officers Gordon and O'Reilly were in charge of the case.

SHOP-LIFTING

Kathleen Corrigan, aged 54 years, Francis street, Dublin, pleaded guilty to charges of stealing articles of women's clothing from the drapers' shops of M. J. Winston and Laurence Cassidy in South Great George's street, Dublin; from Bridget Kenny at a stall in Moore street, and from Messrs. Woolworth's, Henry street, Dublin. She was sentenced to four months' imprisonment with hard labour.

Detective Sergeant McSweeney, Detective Officer Kinahan, and Guard Feely had charge of the case.

Notice to Quit on Door.—"It has been held in this Court that notices to quit must be served upon the tenant, and, if not served personally, evidence must be given that the notice to quit reached the tenant," said Mr. Cussen, Senior Justice, in the Dublin District Court yesterday, during the hearing of a civil ejectment case. He added that he knew of no provision to the contrary under any Act or any rule. The evidence was that the notice to quit had been pinned on the door. Mr. Cussen held that this was not properly served.

CONDITIONS IN FREE STATE

PRESBYTERIAN REPORT

DEMORALISATION ON BORDER

PRAISE AND CRITICISM AT ASSEMBLY

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Friday.

CONDITIONS in the Irish Free State came under review at the meeting of the Presbyterian General Assembly in the Church Hall this evening, when the Rev. Dr. Moody, ex-Moderator, presented and moved the adoption of the report of the Government Committee.

The report stated:—"As to the conditions in the Free State, the Committee reports that, in keeping with other modern nationalist States, any prosperity achieved in the cities is achieved at the impoverishment of the rural population, whose capital and credit are almost exhausted.

"What concerns the Church most is that the Government's repudiation of its responsibilities is causing its citizens to repudiate their responsibilities. In districts adjoining the border the profits to be made by avoiding the Customs officers is spreading lawlessness and demoralisation amongst young and old.

"While not endorsing the policy of the Minister of Education, the Convener has experienced from the Education Board understanding of, and sympathy for, the Presbyterian schools in adjusting themselves to recent educational legislation.

THE IRISH LANGUAGE

"Save in the matter of the Irish language, elementary education is carried on as under the Commissioners. It is, however, regrettable that education within the Free State is not advancing in the way it has advanced in other countries since the war. Schools, especially in rural areas, are lacking in buildings and equipment, and managers are denied the financial support that Governments provide in other countries. In many cases this is left to the teachers, which is unjust to the teachers and inadequate for the school."

The Very Rev. Dr. Morrow, Clontarf, speaking in support of the report, laid stress on the fact that they had no cause of complaint against the Government in the Free State. Two of the T.D.'s were Presbyterians, and they were always given a sympathetic hearing in the Free State Parliament.

EDUCATION STATIC

Education was virtually in the same form as it was under the Commissioners of Education, with the exception of the important addition of the Irish language. They complained that education was not progressive, but that it was static. It was what he knew it first, fifty years ago. Money was not spent upon education, but on special things which were more valuable to the politicians than the parents of the children. They were not concerned with politics, but were concerned with the conditions of the country. Those who knew their way about in the Free State and had influence with certain people were able to get on and make money.

He referred to the proposal to issue an abridgment of Professor Curtis's History of Ireland, in co-operation with the Church of Ireland, for use by Presbyterian children in the day schools, and the Assembly gave authority to co-operate in this matter.

POLITICS IN EDUCATION

The Rev. J. C. Breakey, Dublin, said that their Church was not opposed to the Irish language as a language. Some of their students were trained in the Irish language for work in the West of Ireland, and some of the finest Gaelic scholars in Dublin were Presbyterians. What they objected to was the attempt to teach through the medium of Irish, because they believed that it militated seriously against the education of the rising generation. An attempt was being made to use education as a policy of State. The schools should be used to educate, and not for the advancement of policy.

They were also opposed to the Irish sweepstakes from the beginning. Ireland would not become again an Isle of Saints and Scholars by turning the fair City of Dublin into another Monte Carlo.

The report was adopted.

RELIGION AS "SIDE SHOW"

The report on intermediate education stated the number of examinations held during the year, and showed the necessity for religious education in connection with the secondary schools.

"Religious education," it stated, "is as necessary as secular education, and it is the Church's province to supply and control that education."

"Religious education at prseent, if not an extra," it continued, "is something of a side-show. Nothing like the same amount of time is given to is as, for instance, to Latin or science. Whenever any attempt is made to teach scripture very little more can be done in 20 minutes or half an hour once a week—40 half-hours in the year—than to get a portion actually read. Some masters are wholly incompetent to teach the subject at all."

WHERE FREE STATE LEADS

The Rev. A. J. Gailey, Galway, in presenting and moving the adoption of the report (for Dr. Humphreys, who was ill) said that the time had come for religion to resume again the position that it had held in the schools. If they were to have sturdy citizenship they must have religious education.

The Rev. J. W. Johnston, in seconding the motion, noted the number of secondary schools in the Free State where their young people had systematic religious instruction, and he was rather disappointed by the relatively smaller number of such schools in Ulster.

The report was adopted.

In moving the adoption of the report on religious education in day schools, the Rev. David Hay, Lisburn, said that this was a very important matter. There were some children who would know nothing of the Bible if it was not for the instruction received in the public elementary schools. They came from homes where the name of God was never mentioned.

A WIDE-OPEN DOOR

They had a wonderful opportunity in the schools at the present time by the right of entry. The door was never wider open than it was at present, secured by legislation, but he was sorry to think that some of their ministers did not take as much interest in the day schools or visit the day schools as often as some clergy of other denominations.

There was great apathy shown towards religious instruction in the day schools, and only £200 was contributed by their congregations for this object last year. £35,000 was raised for missionary objects of the Church and £15,000 for sending the Bible to the heathen, but they were doing very little for heathen children at home.

SCANTY CONTRIBUTIONS

He did not deprecate missionary work, but it was not fair that so little was given for religious instruction in the day schools. The Belfast Presbytery contributed only one-fifth of the total amount, although one-third of the total Presbyterian children attended schools in Belfast. He suggested that each congregation should contribute another ten shillings to this work.

The Rev. R. G. McBride, Dervock, also stressed the importance of religious instruction in the day schools. He referred to the great efforts made jointly by the Protestant Churches to secure Bible instruction in the day schools. It would be a calamity if, having won that fight, they lost the peace by apathy as a Church in taking part in the religious instruction in the day schools.

A GREAT OPPORTUNITY

It had been stated that "To educate children without religion was to make and raise clever devils." It was not their desire to raise clever devils in Northern Ireland, or anywhere else. They had an opportunity of covering the whole field of elementary education by entering the day schools, rendering sympathetic and effective oversight and encouragement to the teachers and taking part in the instruction. In this work they had the greatest opportunity which their Church ever had.

Mr. Alexander Forgrove, Monaghan, said that in many districts ministers never visited the elementary schools. It was little use having a wide open door if they never entered it for the purpose of giving instruction. He appealed to all their ministers to take more advantage of this than some of them did. If ministers visited these schools for one half-hour per week they would encourage the children and teachers, and it would be helpful to themselves.

The Rev. T. J. Rankin said that, in fairness to quite a number of their ministers, he must state that they went into the schools and assisted in the religious instruction.

The report was adopted.

OVERCROWDED SCHOOLS

The Very Rev. William Corkey, M.A., D.D., moved the adoption of the report on primary education, and referred to the overcrowding in some of their newly provided schools. There were classrooms with sixty or seventy pupils, and in one extreme case there were ninety pupils in one classroom. The physical and mental strain on the health of many of the teachers as a result of overcrowding was very great, and bad for the health of both teachers and children. The Ministry of Education should make a rule that there should be a certain limit to the number of pupils to be allowed in each class—the number should be limited to 40 or 50. He considered that the teachers had made a good case for a revision of the present inspection system.

On the question of teachers' salaries, Dr. Corkey expressed the view that the salary "cuts" having been restored to English and Scottish teachers, the teachers of Northern Ireland should be dealt with in a sympathetic and generous way by the Government. He moved the adoption of the report and resolutions condemning overcrowding, urging the Government of Northern Ireland to keep step with the educational reforms being carried out by the Imperial Parliament, and urging a deeper interest in primary education.

The Rev. David Hay seconded the motion, which was carried.

The Rev. James Edgar spoke on the matter of the transfer of children in the Free State. He thought the matter required attention if their children were to be safeguarded.

TRIBUTES

High tributes were paid to the Very Rev. Dr. Corkey, who was retiring from the Convenership, for the valuable work he had done for primary education.

A resolution in these terms was moved by the Rev. Dr. J. C. Johnston, seconded by the Rev. Dr. Haslett, and supported by the Rev. Dr. Little, whose remarks were endorsed by the Moderator.

The Very Rev. Dr. Moody, in submitting the report of the Shankill Road Mission, referred to the coming retirement of the Rev. Dr. Montgomery. He said that Dr. Montgomery retired bearing with him the love and respect of those in the Assembly who knew him intimately.

The report was adopted.

In the evening the reports of the Young Peoples' Guild and the Sabbath Schools were considered, and an address was delivered by the Rev. Professor W. R. Forrester, M.C., B.D.

IRISH DOCTOR'S DEATH

A LIFE OF SPLENDID SERVICE

The death, which took place recently near Singida, of Dr. James Septimus Armstrong, M.C., B.A., M.B., B.Ch., B.A.O., Medical Officer in the service of the Tanganyika Government, has caused widespread regret in the district.

Born in 1891 in County Sligo, Dr. Armstrong was a son of the Very Rev. Chancellor Armstrong, Tempo, County Fermanagh Prior to the War he was studying arts at Trinity College, Dublin, with the intention of entering the Church; but in 1915 he enlisted in the Royal Army Medical Corps, and in 1917 was granted a commission in the Royal Dublin Fusiliers, and was awarded the Military Cross on the Western Front.

In 1918 he returned to his studies, and received the degree of B.A. He then took up the study of medicine, obtaining honours in Anatomy and Physiology, and graduated as Bachelor of Medicine and Surgery in 1924, holding an appointment as House Surgeon at the Adelaide Hospital, Dublin, in the same year. In 1925 he obtained the certificate of the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, and joined the East African Medical Service in August.

On arrival in Tanganyika, says the Tanganyika Standard, he was stationed at Dar es Salaam, and subsequently was in medical charge of Arusha, Mahenge, Dodoma, and of the Singida area. Since 1932 he had thrown all his energies into the co-ordination of sleeping sickness preventive measures and anti-tsetse work in the Singida area, where his kindness, enthusiasm, and devotion to duty endeared him to all who knew him.

A quiet and industrious worker, Dr. Armstrong had been a keen fisherman; but his particular hobby was chess, at which he was a real expert, delighting in solving and composing the intricate problems presented by that absorbing game.

Dr. Armstrong was taken suddenly ill on March 10, and was already convalescent when his condition became less satisfactory on April 7, and, following a consultation, arrangements were made to transfer him to Dar es Salaam. He collapsed suddenly in the train some two hours after leaving Singida, and died very shortly afterwards.

He was buried at Singida, where his wife and children had remained, on April 15, in the presence of the residents of all nationalities in Singida. A firing party was provided by the Tanganyika Police, and the Burial Service was read by Mr. H. H. Allsopp, District Officer. A number of wreaths, including one from his colleagues in the Medical Department, were laid on the coffin.

The Indian community showed the affection and respect which they felt by closing their shops on the day of the funeral, and conveyed their desire to contribute to a memorial to their late medical officer in a touching letter to the District Officer from the President of the Indian Association.

BOUND AND GAGGED MAN IN CELLAR

SALFORD POLICE SEARCH FOR MURDERER

The police believe that George Cox, aged about sixty, who was found dead in a lodging-house cellar in Hume place, Salford, early yesterday, was robbed and murdered. He was gagged and his feet and hands were bound. He had multiple injuries to the head and body, and a post-mortem examination showed that these had caused his death.

Throughout the day the Salford police carried out a wide search for Private James Martin, a Lancashire Fusilier recruit, who is a native of Glasgow, and had been stationed at Bury. A police statement says that he has been absent from his unit since June 1st.

Cox. who was last seen alive at about noon on Wednesday, was a bachelor, and occupied rooms on the ground floor of the lodging-house. His death was discovered when a search was made by the people who had called to pay rent. He was a powerfully-built man, and would be likely to put up a defence if attacked, but no lodger in the house heard anything unusual during the early hours of yesterday or Thursday.

MAIL TRAIN ON FIRE

BELFAST, Friday.

When the Dublin to Belfast mail train reached Victoria Street Station, Belfast, this morning, flames and clouds of smoke were seen issuing from the corridor link between the first coach and the mail van.

The stationmaster and his staff quelled the flames with fire extinguishers and water, but not before the woodwork and canvas of the corridor link had been badly damaged.

The fire is believed to have been caused by a spark from the engine.

MOUNT STREET CLUB

ENJOYABLE CONCERT

Dropping into the Mount Street Club last night, in the midst of a concert, and listening to a big gathering of unemployed men joining in rollicking choruses, one felt a glow of satisfaction that this club, which is novel of its kind in Dublin, has made such splendid progress, and that it was bringing so much pleasure into so many otherwise cheerless lives. The club is really a wonderful institution, which caters for the needs of unemployed or casually employed men. The ruling principle is to provide as many means as possible whereby the unemployed man may help himself. If he should want a meal, or to mend his chair, or sole his boots; if he wants a haircut or a shave, to read or write, or play a game, or, most desirable of all, to keep himself physically fit and be ready for industry when industry is ready for him, he may, by his own effort, do all or any of these things at the club.

The great thing is that here a man can find something useful to do, and so fill in those hours which, without some occupation, hang so heavily and depressingly on the hands of the man who is out of constant work. He can spend the hours at the club, acquiring a knowledge of many useful crafts. Here he can present himself every morning and have some task assigned, which preserves in him a sense of independence and a knowledge that he is serving some purpose. There are benefits which accrue, but a man receiving them knows that he has earned them, and thus his self-respect is preserved.

The worth of the Club is shown by the fact that in the year or so that it has been in existence its membership has grown from fifty to a hundred and twenty, and is still increasing.

There are all sorts of sections to occupy the men's attention, and all are controlled by the members themselves. They help in cabinet and furniture making, boot repairing, tailoring, and baking; and there are games and games committees.

Last night's concert was a sample of their organising ability, and it was a thoroughly enjoyable affair, in which songs were contributed by C. Lawlor, C. Mahon, M. Finnegan, J. Hyland, M. Brown, P. Lawlor, and Tom Betts. Comic songs were given by T. Mahon, J. Carroll, and Charles Doyle; melodeon solos by C. Doyle, guitar solos by T. Glanville, and step-dancing by Stephen Rogers.

A one-act sketch, "The Ghost of Jerry Bundle," by members, caused great amusement.

Miss G. McNevin accompanied the songs.

ATTACKS ON JEWS

POGROM IN POLISH TOWN

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

WARSAW, Friday.

About four thousand Jews have fled here for protection from anti-Semitic riots which have broken out at Minsk Mazowiecki, twenty miles away. Jewish deputies have asked the Government to intervene.

The trouble began when Jan Bujak, a cavalry sergeant, was killed in a personal quarrel with a Jew named Lejb Chaskielewicz. Anti-Jewish groups attacked Jewish homes, breaking windows and setting fire to the houses. No Jew was safe in the streets, and six were attacked and injured.

Police detachments and the fire brigade from Warsaw were rushed to Minsk Mazowiecki to assist the local authorities to quell the disturbance. Meanwhile the situation has caused a panic among the Jewish population.

Of those who have not resorted to finding a refuge in the capital, 500 have sought shelter in their offices and the Jewish community house.

SPECULATIVE INSURANCE

APPEAL BY LLOYD'S COMMITTEE

BODY TO DECIDE ALL DOUBTFUL CASES

AN appeal to all Lloyd's underwriting agents to refuse "purely speculative contingency risks, unless they are satisfied that the assured has a legitimate interest," was issued last evening, following a meeting of the committee at Lloyd's.

It is proposed to set up a committee to give a ruling in doubtful cases, and to draw up an agreement signed by all underwriting agents.

Mr. W. C. Crocker, the solicitor who was concerned in the Budget inquiries at Lloyd's, was present, and gave his advice at the meeting.

CHAIRMAN'S LETTER

The appeal was contained in a letter signed by Mr. Neville Dixey, Chairman of Lloyd's. His letter is as follows:—"The Committee are anxious to prevent the writing of contingency risks which are purely speculative, and they accordingly appeal to all underwriting agents not to accept such risks without first satisfying themselves that the assured has a legitimate interest in the covering of such risks, nor without requiring the name of the assured to appear in the slip.

"The Committee propose to set up a permanent sub-committee, from whom agents can at short notice obtain a ruling in cases where they have doubt as to whether there is an insurable interest in any risk offered to them.

"It is proposed to obtain the signature of all underwriting agents to an agreement on these lines."

MR. BATES'S OFFER

The Press Association was yesterday officially informed that the underwriters concerned in Mr. Alfred Bates's Budget risk transactions have decided to accept the offered refund of the claims paid.

Mr. Bates was held by the Budget Tribunal to have used for the purpose of his private gain information disclosed to him by Mr. J. H. Thomas.

When a reporter informed Mr. Bates of the underwriters' decision he said, "I have heard nothing."

PINNED TO PLATFORM

DUBLIN WORKMEN'S INJURIES

Two Dublin men, Archibald Nelson, of 44 Mount street, and John McGrath, of 1 Clare street, had a narrow escape from death yesterday when the wooden jib of a crane on which they were working broke in two and pinned them to the platform sixty feet above the ground. Both were taken to St. Vincent's Hospital with broken legs, McGrath being so seriously hurt that one limb had to be amputated. His other leg was also badly fractured, but it is understood that the doctors may be able to set the bone. Nelson also sustained a fractured leg, but his condition is not so serious.

The accident took place during building operations behind Holles Street Maternity Hospital, where a new wing is being erected, and there were eight or nine men on the crane when the jib snapped. The crane, which is capable of lifting a two-ton load, was carrying about fourteen hundred-weight. Suddenly the arm broke, and the lower portion of a metal girder jumped from the socket and fell on top of the two men. Had it not been for an iron railing, which surrounds the platform, they would have fallen on to the stone foundations sixty feet below.

In an interview with an Irish Times reporter, one of the workmen said: "I was engaged on the ground when I heard the beam splinter and crack. The load fell with a crash to the ground, and I noticed that two of the men were lying on the floor of the platform. The other workmen, who were also on the crane, ran to their assistance."

McGrath had to be lowered to the ground on a stretcher by the use of ropes, but Nelson was able to use one foot and both his hands, and slid most of the way down the ladder to the ground.

Both men were employed by Messrs. G. and T. Crampton, Ltd., Ballsbridge, Nelson as a carpenter and McGrath as a crane operator.

GALLANT SCHOOL TEACHER

HOLDS BANDITS AT BAY

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

MEXICO CITY, Friday.

How a woman school teacher in the village of Tepeixto, armed only with a rifle, gallantly held off twenty bandits single-handed until the arrival of Federal agents, is told in a telegram from Puebla to-day.

The bandits attacked the village, took possession of it and set fire to the school. The teacher, Señorita Maria Hernandez, learning that they were seeking her, barricaded herself in her private house. From there she fired on the invaders as they approached.

Although wounded in the arm she managed to keep them off for twenty minutes until help arrived.

CONDITIONS IN THE NORTH

JUSTICE'S STATEMENT

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Friday.

The magistrates of Northern Ireland, at their annual meeting to-day, dissociated themselves from any connection with the "Council of Civil Liberties."

Mr. C. A. Munro, Derry, in seconding the adoption of the annual report, referred to the matter.

"I would like to dissociate ourselves from this self-called Council of National Liberties," he said. "I understand that they are trying to drag us in as supporters of their policy. As Sir Robert Kennedy has pointed out, our policy is to protect the rights of the magistrates in Northern Ireland, but not to concede anything of the rights of the province."

Continuing, Mr. Munro said that he understood tht the so-called Council were trying to bring about a happy marriage between the North and the South. "We would all be ready to do that under the old conditions," he added, amid applause. "But if by any chance the introduction of the name of their association led the general public to think that we sympathise with them, I think we would like to make it perfectly clear that we do not."

The Chairman (Sir Robert Kennedy, K.C.M.G.) said that their association had nothing whatever to do with that Council, which was "butting in" and causing disturbance here among them. "We are here to protect the interests of the magistracy,

BELFAST BOARD OF GUARDIANS

ELECTION SURPRISE

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Friday.

There was a surprise in the elections for the Belfast Board of Guardians, the results of which were declared to-day. Two of the official Unionist candidates in Duncairn Ward—Mr. John Wilson, J.P., a former chairman of the Board of Guardians, and now chairman of the Finance Committee, and Mr. Thomas Gibb—were defeated. There were three seats, and the successful candidates were Wm. Bradbury, Protestant Defence League, who defeated the Official Unionist candidate at the recent municipal election; Cecil M. Lowe, and George H. Hart. Only forty-nine per cent. of the electors went to the poll, and small polls were also recorded in the Clifton Dock and Pottinger Wards, in all of which the Unionists were victorious. In Pottinger only twenty per cent. of the voters polled.

and this Council has acted rather like a third person butting into a temporary quarrel between an eminently respectable husband and wife. I feel perfectly certain that if that third person butts in the husband and wife will join together and kick him out." (Applause and laughter.)

Mr. David Johnston, Lurgan, said that they had heard a great deal about the Council, and across the water people were asking: "What sort of conduct is going on in Belfast?" "The report of this Council, I don't know from what source it came, exaggerated very considerably, but, still, it had a certain amount of bearing on what has taken place in Belfst," he observed.

Trinity Sunday : Visitors to Dublin : A Hall of Music : Fairies : Swimming Pools

Trinity Sunday

Trinity Sunday is upon us again. The festival of Trinity was really instituted by St. Thomas à Becket in honour of the Godhead. Since his time, in the twelfth century, hundreds of English churches have been dedicated to the Holy Trinity in veneration of the mystery. Architects and decorators have in early times racked their brains to discover special devices which would express the mystery of the Trinity. Some curious ones of these are still preserved. In Ireland St. Patrick is said to have explained the mystery through the shamrock, which he made symbolical of the Trinity. In Dublin we have Trinity College, and formerly Christ Church Cathedral was originally named the Church of the Holy Trinity. Coming back to 1936, however, I note that one of the features of Trinity Week this time is attracting the attention of the London United Hospital swimmers. Their team is coming to compete against Dublin University at the swimming gala on Thursday next at the Iveagh Baths.

Visitors to Ireland

Sir George and Lady Martin, who are at present on a visit to Ireland, were at Baldoyle on Monday afternoon. Sir George, who is a friend of Dr "Jim" Magennis, and also of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Maguire, of Claremorris (brother and sister-in-law of the Attorney-General), is a Justice of the Peace and an Alderman of the County Borough of Leeds. Lady Martin is, I think, one of the few women I have ever seen look well at a race meeting without a hat. Perhaps that is because she wore a really ravishing mink coat. Not just an ordinary mink coat this one; for it was dark and sable-like, and finer than any of these luxurious garments I have yet seen. The mink coat so far has no rival, for even on the films I see it is the prerogative of the rich heroine, and an object of veneration to coal-black mammys and nannys alike. I do hope, however, that smart women will not carry the hatless vogue on to our racecourses, because, for one reason, it would be very bad for business. Dublin milliners and hatters must live, and the tradition of a members' enclosure, and even Tattersalls Ring is all for convention! I think Sir George and Lady Martin must be of Irish extraction, and I imagine they are going on to Connemara—perhaps they are returning from there for all I know.

A Hall of Music

I see that Liverpool Philharmonic Society proposes to erect a great new Hall of Music to seat two thousand people. The cost of this great hall is estimated to be about £90,000, with an organ estimated to cost about £5,000. In this hall there are to be no overhanging balconies or galleries: the stalls are to sweep backward to the level of a row of boxes, with an additional tier of seats rising gradually from the upper level of the boxes. It is proposed to have this hall ready for the 1937-38 concert season, and to open it with a musical festival in which many famous artists will take part. Dublin is filled to overflowing with musical societies, including the Dublin Philharmonic Society, which has been doing excellent work; but they are all hampered by the lack of an adequate concert hall. Perhaps if they all pooled their energies and resources in a large Dublin Musical Federation, formed especially for the express purpose of building a concert hall in the city, something might be done quickly in the matter. Possibly the Federation could hold a flag day to collect funds, and stimulate public support at the same time; but possibly the better way would be to organise the Federation as a limited liability company, with a large list of shareholders who would not look primarily for profits.

June and the Lions

The Dublin Zoological celebrations—their garden party and dance—remind me that June was considered the month of the lions by James I. In that month this Monarch and his Court always paid a ceremonial visit each year to the lions in the Tower of London. Examples of the larger carnivora were always maintained in that grim seat of English royalty, as a mark of regal magnificence. They were originally installed there by Henry III., who placed three leopards in the Tower, which were presented to him by the Emperor Frederick in allusion to the three leopards on the Royal shield. The Dublin Zoo was, I believe, originally founded by one of the Viceroys. The lion house was built by the late Lord Roberts out of subscriptions raised by him. Whether the Zoo idea is a right one or not from the animal point of view is a difficult problem. Man has ever been unthinking in his treatment of the animal creation. Captivity is not perhaps the correct treatment for lions; but, of course, if they are born in captivity, that's a different matter.

Swimming Pools

Another summer is now upon us and yet Dublin is without any decent open-air swimming pools. Almost every large town in Great Britain, and many in Ireland, have spent large sums of money upon these necessary pools, but Dublin still lags behind. In Cork and Belfast, and even some smaller provincial towns, the local authorities have provided open-air baths and pools, but in Dublin there is an incredible apathy on the subject. In London, where there are almost insuperable difficulties to be surmounted, the local authorities have provided open-air swimming baths and sun-bathing accommodation. In Dublin, where there is really no insuperable obstacle, nothing has yet been done. In three Dublin parks there are small ponds which could easily be adapted to swimming and bathing purposes, and the adaptation should have been done long ago. The "Dog Pond" in the Phœnix Park is almost ideal for the purpose; so is the eastern end of the pond in St. Stephen's Green Park; and so, also, is the shallow pond in Herbert Park. In addition to these park ponds, there are several disused "bays" along the Grand Canal, which probably could be acquired for adaptation; notably at Portobello, Harold's Cross and Dolphin's Barn.

Fairies

A correspondent writes: You seem to be strangely ignorant on the subject of "Fairies," considering that Dr. W. Y. Evans Wentz has compiled an excellent account of the Celtic traditions on the subject in his "The Fairy Faith in Celtic Countries," and that several "seers," including the late Dr. George Russell, have described them from observation. If we are to cater for our American visitors' interest in the subject, let us at least present it in accordance with ascertained facts. One important error that you make is that of calling the Tuatha de Danan "fairies." The Tuatha de Danan are referred to in Irish literature as "sidhe," not fairies, and are described as a tall, beautiful race, rather Greek-like in features, and great horsemen. Dr. Russell observed and painted the "sidhe," and in all his descriptions of them they are very beautiful beings. Others, gifted with "second sight," have described the fairies in Ireland, and under that general heading are included the gnomes, or earth-elementals, as well as the true surface fairies. One well-known "seer" has given an interesting account of Irish fairies—particularly those of the ancient sacred mountain of Slieve-na-mon.

Aeromodellists

The craze for flying model aeroplanes—preferably constructed by the owner—has firmly established itself in England, and any wide, open space within easy reach of a town is used by the local aeromodellists for the launching of their 'planes. In the streets themselves it is quite usual to meet people who, after the day's work is done, hurry out to the park or to the fields, carrying the home-made model that must surely break the record. Many towns have their own clubs for the enthusiasts, and all hopes are set on the Wakefield Trophy, awarded to the model that remains longest in the air: already one of the amazingly light-weight toys has been known to glide about for twenty-two minutes before landing. Every aviation paper publishes advertisements of "construction kits," consisting of soft, pliable wood, very thin paper of a special kind, strands of rubber, and, finally, the so-called "dope" with which the completed model is painted. The motive power that will enable the 'plane to rise into the desired up-currents of air is supplied by the twisting of the eight strands of rubber by means of a special winder. Other models are launched with the help of compressed air, introduced by means of a motor pump. After that they depend, like gliders, on air currents.

QUIDNUNC.

DUBLIN'S "LUNGS"

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES

Sir,—Thirty-six years ago a young man from the South—from County Cork, to be precise—used to have to spend his summers in Dublin. August in Dublin is often hot and dusty, more often wet and, may be, cold, but always dreary.

He lodged at 2 Upper Mount street, and in the evenings, when his work was over, he would walk round Merrion square, peering and pining through its railings. His house, his lodging, was just off the edge, so he had not a key to the square. Those who had a key made little use of that big, deserted space; the doctors and their families had gone to the sea or elsewhere for their holidays, and the young man and the old, poor men and the nursing mothers could do nothing but sit on the curb beside the railings, spit on the pavement, and for three good days in August comment on the fashion on outside cars going to and from the Horse Show.

We have so few "lungs" in Dublin. Stephen's Green, one of the loveliest squares a city can have; on the north side, Phœnix Park—the noblest of parks, but a little away, too far from tired mothers and fretful children who live on the wrong side of the Liffey.

Merrion square is lost to us, dedicated; Mountjoy square is still sealed; Rutland square is to be inhabited by nurses, and, bless them, I do not grudge them their new quarters; but what a pity to ruin that lovely patch? Look at it from the Municipal Gallery, its fall of ground; think of the garden Lutyens could make there—these are dreams. What is not a dream is a little breathing space beside Merrion square—I mean Leinster Lawn. It is quite small, but excellent. Peering and pining through its railings last week I thought I had never seen the flower-beds more beautiful. Failing Merrion square, I used to sit there years ago. There came a time when the garden had to be closed—it was too near the seat of government. Has that time not passed? I do not know the law on the matter, but for many years the citizens of Dublin seemed to have a right to Leinster Lawn. It is not only a "lung": it is a convenience. The passage through it by the National Library to Kildare, Molesworth, Dawson streets is a real short cut. It is quite maddening to be in Merrion square or street, and to want to go to Dawson street, or having brought a friend to the National Gallery to want to take him to the Museum, and to have to walk three sides of a square instead of one. We lose our few liberties so easily by paying no attention to our depredations until they are gone, some "precedent"—dangerous word—is "established." Is the precedent of our loss of Leinster Lawn established, or will some T.D. seriously ask our Government whether the citizens of Dublin could not have Leinster Lawn for their own again?

It might be made more than a pleasant patch of grass and gay flower-beds. We might gradually assemble there busts of the people who, during the past centuries, have made Government Buildings, the Dail, a reality. Surgeon-Major T. H. Parke, perhaps, might have to go elsewhere, though I have an affection for him and his rifle.—Yours, etc.,

LENNOX ROBINSON.

A New Professor

The announcement of the appointment of the Rev. R. R. Hartford, M.A., B.D., to be Archbishop King's Professor of Divinity, has given much pleasure to his many friends in Trinity College. The new professor, who has acted as Deputy Professor during the past year, entered the University from Mountjoy School, and had an academic record which included First Sizarship in mathematics, Junior Exhibition and Scholarship in Mental and Moral Science, as well as the large gold medal at Moderatorship in the latter subject. During his undergraduate career he filled two important posts—the Auditorship of the Theological Society and the Presidency of the Philosophical Society. On his return to academic life in 1931 as Lecturer in Philosophy and assistant to the Professor of Divinity, he was appointed Dean of Residence for Church of Ireland students resident in College. During his year as Deputy Professor he had the distinction of taking his B.D. degree in remarkably short time, with high marks in all subjects.

The select preacher to the University to-morrow will be the Very Rev. J. H. Miller, C.B.E., D.D, Principal of St. Mary's College, Fife, and Lecturer in Sociology of New College, Edinburgh. Dr Miller, who was Moderator of the United Free Church in 1928, served as Principal Chaplain in the Great War, and is now the Senior Territorial Chaplain to the Scottish Command.

We regret to record the passing, after an operation for peritonitis, of Mr. J. F. Mortimer, who was only this week elected to be Senior Member of Committee to the Historical Society for the ensuing session. Educated at Wesley College, Mr. Mortimer entered Trinity College with Sizarship in Mathematics and Junior Exhibition, and won many first-class honours, both in Mathematics and Philosophy, during his all too brief undergraduate career. He was a candidate for the Scholarship examination in Mathematics, the result of which will be announced on Monday next.

The address to the D.U. Churchmen's Guild to-night will be delivered by the Rev. R. R. Hartford, B.D., Archbishop King's Professor of Divinity.

The Harriers and Athletic Club retained the Irish Inter-University Athletic Championship, which they won last year, by defeating University College, Dublin, by 17 points to 12 points, in the Inter-University contest held on Saturday last. Mr. L. N. Horan (Mountjoy School) won two championship events for Trinity with the discus and the shot, Mr. R. H. Wallace (Portora), the captain, also winning two events—the 440 yards and the 120 yards hurdles.

Mr. D. H. McNeill ran a great race in the mile, getting within 3secs. of the "record," while Mr. H. A. Dougan (Campbell College) carried off the half-mile.

The Cricket XI., after a poor performance against Phœnix in a two-day match last week-end, meet Merrion to-day.

THE HORSE SHOW

PRIZE FUND AND LIST OF JUDGES

The prize list for the coming Horse Show (to be held at Ballsbridge on the 4th to the 8th August next) has now been issued by the Royal Dublin Society. The usual liberal classification has been retained in all sections, and the prizes, which include many valuable cups and trophies, total over £6,000 in value.

An innovation is the introduction of a jumping competition for boys and girls (aged twelve to fifteen years), which will take place on the last day of the Show—Saturday, 8th. Hitherto the children's jumping competitions have been confined to the Spring Show, where they have always received enthusiastic support, and there is little doubt that the Society's endeavour to further meet the needs of the young riders will prove a very popular step.

A new trophy, offered for competition for the first time this year, is that presented by the Tattoo Committee, Saorstat Army. With the object of encouraging good breeding, this trophy will be awarded to the exhibitor whose horses obtain the greatest number of points in the ordinary Hunter Classes, 5 points being given for a first prize, 4 points for a second prize, etc., etc.

The following are judges who have agreed to officiate in the various sections:—

Thoroughbreds—Ernest Bellaney, Esker House, Lucan, Co. Dublin; George Smithwick, Gilltown Stud, Sandley, Gillingham, Dorset.

Brood Mares and Young Horses—Major Gordon B. Foster, Leysthorpe, Oswaldkirk, York; Arthur Hunt, Rockmount, Kilmacthomas.

Heavy-weight Hunters—B. Davies, Yeaton, Baschurch, Shropshire; E. W. Hope Johnstone, Raehills, Locherbie, Dumfriesshire.

Medium-weight Hunters—Capt. T. Wickham Boynton, Estate Office, Burton Agnes, Driffield; Adrian Scrope, Sledmere, Malton, Yorks.

Light-weight Hunters—Capt. Guy Lucas, Brackley, Northamptonshire; Herbert Sutton, The Lodge, Market Harborough.

Ladies' Challenge Trophy and Children's Ponies—Lady Hunloke, Cowbridge House, Malmesbury; Mrs. J. K. Stevenson, The Chase, Welland, Malvern.

Riding Cobs and Ponies—Capt. H. G. Morrison, 2 Waverton street, Mayfair, London, W.1 (and another to be appointed).

Harness Horses—F. W. Buttle, Kirkholme, Deepdale avenue, Scarborough.

Jumping Competitions—Capt. E. F. Boylan, D.S.O., Hilltown, Drogheda; P. Dunne Cullinan, Carrolstown, Trim; John Kernohan, M.R.C.V.S., Ballymena; B. T. O'Reilly, Ballynamote, Carrickmines, Co. Dublin; John J Ryan, Scarteen, Knocklong; William Toomey, Annacrevy, Enniskerry; the Hon. Mr. Justice Wylie, Clonsilla House, Clonsilla.

Intending exhibitors are reminded that entries close on the 1st July. Applications for prize lists and entry forms should be made to the Director, Royal Dublin Society, Ballsbridge, Dublin.

IRISH WEDDING IN LONDON

MR. W. T. R. WINGFIELD AND MISS P. COOKE-COLLIS

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

LONDON, Friday.

The marriage took place at Holy Trinity Church, Brompton, London, S.W., to-day, of Mr. William Thomas Rhys Wingfield, only son of Major William Wingfield, late 19th Hussars, and Mrs. Wingfield, of Streetington House, Chichester, and Miss Patricia Cooke-Collis, only child of Major-General W. J. Cooke-Collis, commanding the Northern Ireland district, and Mrs. Cooke-Collis, of Ravenhill, Green Island, Co. Antrim, formerly of Castle Cooke, County Cork.

The ceremony was performed by Canon Blakeney, of Peterborough Cathedral, assisted by the Rev. W. Marshall Selwyn.

Banks of hydrangeas in shades of pale pink and pale blue formed a pleasing floral setting.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a classical gown of satin in an ivory shade, a faint hint of pearl pink being in the material. Her long train was fashioned in one with the skirt. The bodice was perfectly simple, save for the shirring, which gave slight fulness to the corsage. Her veil was of tulle, tinted to match the gown, and secured by a wreath of mother of pearl orange buds. She carried a sheaf of Madonna lilies.

The train was borne by Miss Jane and Master Malcolm Drummond-Hay, children of Mr. and Lady Margaret Drummond-Hay. They wore Kate Greenaway costumes, the boy's suit being of love-in-the-mist blue satin, and the girl's dress of organdie, in a matching shade. At the waist was a wide sash of similar blue satin, and she wore a halo of blue crystal and little silver berries, and carried a posy of mixed blue and pale pink flowers.

Mrs. Rupert Tollemache was a matron of honour, and there were four bridesmaids—the Hon. Gwen Abbott, daughter of Lord and Lady Tenterden, and cousin of the bride; Miss Susan Wingfield, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Mollie Mallet and Miss Pamela Huggins, daughter of Major and Mrs. Gilbert Huggins. Their gowns were also classical in design and were of heavy crêpe, in a lavender-mauve shade. The skirts formed slight trains from the hem and the simple bodices had square-cut necklines. The bell-shaped cuffs of the long sleeves were turned back, to reveal a wide ruching of pale blue chiffon. They also wore haloes of blue crystal and silver berries, and held sheaves of pale blue delphinium.

Mr. Denis Milbank acted as best man to the bridegroom.

Mrs. Cooke-Collis, in black relieved with a white gradenia on the corsage, held a reception in the Adjutants' House, Royal Hospital, Chelsea, which was lent by Major Gilbert Huggins.

When the bride and bridegroom left for a honeymoon, in Devonshire, the bride travelled in a dress of turquoise blue marocaine, over which she wore a long coat of fine black wool. Her black hat was of a "halo" shape.

COCOCUBS FOR GAELTACHT

In co-operation with the Coiste na bPaisti, Messrs. Fry-Cadbury (Ireland), Ltd., are providing at least five free scholarships for visits to the Gaeltacht by members of their Cococub Club. The scholarships are split up to cover three areas—Dublin, Galway and Cork. Members of the Cococub Club between the ages of 10 and 15 are invited to write to Fry-Cadbury in Irish telling what they did and saw during the Easter holidays. A native Irish speaker will choose from the best of these letters 25 candidates who will be examined orally in Irish by the Coiste na bPaisti, and at least five will be sent to the Gaeltacht under the scholarships provided by Messrs. Fry-Cadbury, who are to be congratulated on their enterprise. Entries cannot be accepted after 15th June. Full particulars may be had from Messrs. Fry-Cadbury (Ireland), Ltd., Ossory road, Dublin.

THE CENTENARY CHURCH

In the Methodist Centenary Church, St. Stephen's Green, special Services will be held to-morrow, at which the preachers will be the Rev. William C. Jackson, M.A., the President of the Methodist Church in Great Britain and Ireland, and the Rev. Archibald Harrison, M.C., D.D., Principal of the Westminster Training College, London. Mr. Jackson and Dr. Harrison are the two principal visitors from England to the Methodist Conference, which begins its sessions in Belfast on Tuesday next.

SATURDAY'S listening this week consists of any amount of attractive items. It will be possible to tune-in at almost any hour and get something satisfactory, according to taste, from the various stations. There is one farewell, however—those who get B.B.C. National at 7 will hear the final edition of that popular feature, "The Saturday Magazine," and "In Town To-night." The familiar "Carry on London" will be heard for the last time this season at the conclusion of the hundredth edition of "In Town To-night," in which a high standard of interest has been maintained throughout.

Arthur Prince and "Jim" will be among the crew to-night in the second edition of "Eight Bells," the scene of which is the quarterdeck of H.M.S. St. George. The popular ventriloquist is only one of many first-class entertainers who comprise the ship's company.

Stuart Robertson is singing with the B.B.C. Chorus and Orchestra in a very attractive programme, which includes a new work receiving its first performance. This is a set of Six Choral Pictures by Leslie Woodgate, who will conduct the concert. Some of Delius's lovely Summer Music also is in the programme. (National, 10.35.)

Astra Desmond (contralto) is singing in the programme of the Macgibbon String Quartet at 8.30 (Regional), and Derek Oldham (tenor) is to be heard in a light programme by the B.B.C. Theatre Orchestra. The music includes Greenwood's Suite, "Man of Aran," in which one gets three impressions: 1, Aran Isles; 2, On the Seashore, and 3, The Return of the Hunters.

The Ballad Operetta from Radio Athlone has been prepared by Lambert Patterson. The ballads chosen link together portions of dialogue forming a mediæval plot. Preceding the operetta, at 7.40, the News Reel for May will be unwound, recalling in dramatic form special events in the news of the past month. These programmes are produced and given by members of the University College, Dublin, Dramatic Society, under their able director, Mr. Desmond Bell.

Radio Athlone continues its relay of the Commentary on the International Davis Cup tennis matches from the Fitzwilliam courts this afternoon. For this purpose the station will open at 5 for the Commentary on Ireland v. Switzerland, and the conclusion will be heard during the gramophone half-hour, which commences at 5.45.

F. J. Findon and Major Vernon Brook will give running commentaries on the Shelsley Walsh International Open Hill Climb for racing and sports cars, at 4.30 (Midland Regional).

THE lives of the greater composers almost invariably yield interesting material. There is a strange fascination in a true story of genius and romance struggling against, perhaps, poverty and ill-health—conditions under which some of the world's most glorious music has been written. We have been afforded a glimpse into several of these great lives from time to time in specially written radio plays.

Sunday's special broadcast will give listeners the romance of Hector Berlioz and Harriet Smithson in the story which lies behind the Fantastic Symphony. Entitled "Episode in the Life of an Artist," Wilfred Rooke Ley and Holt Marvel have collaborated in telling the story of the love of the eminent French composer for the beautiful Irish actress, whom he married, and who became his inspiration.

Religious broadcasts include a Gaelic Service from the Abbey, Iona, for which there was a preparatory programme on Friday last, and a Festival of Commemoration of the 800th Anniversary of the granting of the Charter of Foundation of Melrose Abbey. Those taking part include the Rev. Archibald Main, D.D., Regius Professor of Ecclesiastical History in the University of Glasgow; the Choirs of Melrose, and the B.B.C. Scottish Singers and Orchestra, conducted by Ian Whyte. The relay will come from Melrose Abbey at 3, and from Iona at 11—each on the Scottish wavelength.

IRISH INVENTORS HANDICAPPED

HIGH TIME FOR A CHANGE IN THE LAW

Under the present patent law it costs the Free State inventor approximately twice as much to obtain a patent in the Free State as it costs an inventor in other countries, including England, Denmark, Germany, to obtain a patent in his own country.

This statement was made yesterday by Mr. Francis de Sales Lysaght, 56 Merrion square, Dublin, manager of Messrs. Tomkins and Co. (formerly Byrne and Co.) since its inception in 1927, to the Committee of Inquiry into the law relating to trade marks, patents and designs.

Mr. Lysaght, who is author of "Law and Practice Relating to Patents, Designs and Trade Marks in the Free State," said that the double cost was due to the onus being placed on the applicant to prove that an invention was novel, whereas in other countries where definite patent monopoly rights were granted such investigations were made by the State. It would appear, he said, that the conditions which led to the enactment of the present law in 1927, had undergone material change, and there was now no great obstacle in the way of relieving the Irish inventor of the hardship of the present system and at the same time establishing a truly national patent system entirely independent of that of the United Kingdom or any other country.

Mr. J. Geoghegan, K.C., T.D., chairman, presided.

SNOW AND FROST IN ITALY

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

ROME, Friday.

Topsy-turvy weather is being experienced all over Italy. Snow is falling on the higher mountains, and rivers are flooding. The Simplon Pass, leading to Switzerland, is under snow, but remains open.

At Novara, a little town in the north of Italy, the temperature dropped at dawn to freezing point. Incessant rain and hailstorms have caused rivers to overflow near Milan, and parts of the suburb are flooded. At Savona, a town west of the Italian Riviera, crops have been destroyed, and part of the main road has been carried away by a cloud-burst.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK

Origins of Parliament

Evidence from Irish History

Medieval Representation and Consent. By M. V. Clarke. London: Longmans Green. 18/- net.

THE author of this weighty volume died when her work, a study of fourteenth-century parliamentary institutions, was virtually complete. Miss Clarke took as the basis of her research a little-known document, the Modus Tenendi Parliamentum, which describes the composition and procedure of Parliament: it is a glorification of Parliament, and professes to describe principles that were in force before the Norman conquest, and were adopted by the Norman Kings. The few scholars who have examined the text before Miss Clarke are disposed to deny it any historic worth: they treat it as an essay in idealism rather than as evidence of a real state of affairs. Miss Clarke shows cause to accord it a greater importance.

An Irish Magna Carta

The first recorded official recognition of the Modus is its exemplification under the Great Seal of Ireland in 1419. It seems that it was brought to Ireland by William of Windsor in order to instruct the colonists; or else Sir Robert Preston, Chief Justice of Common Pleas, or some other Anglo-Irish official, brought it forward to constrain the executive. Whoever sponsored it, the Modus was used by the Anglo-Irish as a sort of Irish Magna Carta. A special Irish version was exemplified at Trim with the Coronation oath as a codicil (surely a remarkable parallel to the Treaty of 500 years later!), and "from that time forward Parliament, either in fact or in theory, remained at the centre of Irish political life."

Its Origin

Now, the Modus could not have attained this prestige in Ireland per saltum. If it had been furbished up by some discontented proctor as a means to uphold the rights of the lower clergy and to protest against the taxation of 1370—these were the causes of its production in Ireland—it would have been treated at its value as a document of protest, and it would not have been used to instruct the Anglo-Irish ruling class in the powers and privileges of Parliament. Evidently, it already possessed no small prestige, to put the case at the lowest. Therefore, the English original must go back to a considerably earlier date. Miss Clarke argues, accordingly, that—

The facts suggest that in England, where Parliament had grown with great rapidity in the reign of Edward III., it was already old-fashioned, while the Irish, with their half-formed and half-understood system of government, still required the direction of an authoritative summary of the functions and powers of Parliament. This is the more probable because the English, with their formal conservatism, based upon law, have always been slow to admit the difference between the legal and the actual, especially where the rights of others are concerned.

Majority Rule

What is most interesting in the Modus is the survival of ideas of unanimity. It shows how slowly the notion of majority rule grew. "The underlying idea," says Miss Clarke, "seems to be that elected agents, who represent totam communitatem Angliæ, must reach a unanimous decision, unlike the magnates who come to Parliament each for himself and for no other"; and it was later that the notion of majority verdict began to separate itself from that of unanimity.

It is not hard to see why a high value has always been set on the idea of a unanimous judgment, as it not only carries with it the compulsion of authority, but it is the outward sign of that permanent harmony which ought to be the basis of all united action. In a society made up of many orders, the best conditions are achieved when the members of each order are in full agreement with each other and when all orders together co-operate to reach a common end for the common good. This is the ideal of action in the Modus, a familiar mediæval ideal, which at a later date was sometimes compared to the harmonious movement of the spheres.

It was the Church that sought to reconcile the ideal with the practicable, says Miss Clarke, and she shows how it "tried to secure both the great moral advantage of unanimity and the practical advantage of a majority decision." Churchmen could not agree that melior et sanior pars always was identical with major pars; and so the representation of assemblies became part of the fabric of social order. Assemblies could pick their own melior et sanior pars, and agreement between such representatives in Parliament was more easily practicable than if all representation was direct.

This is a book of deep learning and even deeper thought. It ought to be taken into account by the present framers of an Irish Constitution.

New Novels

Live On! By Mary Dunstan. Constable. 7/6 net.

MISS Dunstan has chosen an eerie theme for her novel. Ian Loudoun, a Scottish landowner, is bound deeply to his ancestral home by tradition—and more. Afar back in the hills, he has discovered a circle of stones—another and more perfect Stonehenge, a relic of a past cult which had its roots deep in the past. He falls under the spell of the place, which, coupled with his love for his home, binds him completely to the lands of his fathers. How the unhealthy obsession is broken, and Loudoun is led to a freer life, makes a fine novel, though rather on the grim side. Miss Dunstan writes with power and dramatic force, and has a real sense of the macabre.

Concrete Castle. By Francis Gerard. Rich and Cowan. 3/6 net.

AN American millionaire, who is a descendant of one of Caesar Borgia's Condottieri, and who imagines himself to be the re-incarnation of his ancestor, Paolo Fortemani; American gangsters; and an unorthodox detective make good ingredients for a "thriller." John Meredith, the young detective, while leaving the "Yard" for a holiday, is precipitated into a series of adventures which in time call for military action on the part of the government. Gangland from America makes its new headquarters in London, and proceeds with its ambitious and nefarious schemes. In spite of all this Meredith is victorious, but only after a desperate struggle.

Right Honourable Lady. By Gideon Clark. Ivor Nicholson and Watson. 7/6 net.

THE weakest part of Mr. Gideon Clark's new novel is the prologue; for the story proper conveys his meaning more clearly than his own analysis of it. He writes of a woman who succeeds in public life. We follow the course of her career. Training as an elementary school-teacher first; then munitions; then labour agitations culminating in her successful contest for a Labour seat. She becomes a Cabinet Minister, and her ability is everywhere acclaimed. Then she retires. It has been Mr. Clark's task to show the woman in private life developing side by side with the public figure, and he has accomplished it well. One can believe in Charlotte Lindsay's rise to fame. With just a few strokes of luck, of which she takes full advantage, she arrives at her goal through sheer force of character. In real life our curiosity would be aroused as to the private life of such a woman. Mr. Clark succeeds in giving us a most acceptable presentation of it. He indulges in no high flights of fancy or romance. The femininity of Charlotte is a biological fact, not a piece of sentimentality.

Fly Away Paul. By Victor Canning. Hodder and Stoughton. 7/6 net.

"Fly Away Paul" is far too episodic to make a good novel, but the story is amusingly contrived and the situations riotously farcical. It should make an excellent film. In book form it is difficult to sustain interest by a succession of incidents, no matter how funny they may be, without an abundance of wit and humour in the narrative. In a film the personality of the actors and the appeal to the eye are sufficient in themselves, provided the pace is keen. Paul's resemblance to a famous screen artist starts the story. He undertakes, with the help of the star's valet, to carry off a week of publicity in London where the man he resembles is unknown. But an alleged fiancee from America turns up to complicate the situation, and then Paul finds that the star is wanted by the police for a financial fraud. It would be difficult to say whether the police, the public or the lady cause Paul the more embarassment.

Night Action. By Sydney Parkman. Hodder and Stoughton. 7/6 net.

HERE is a plot worked out with all the action and lucidity of one of Mr. John Buchan's novels. The beginning of the last war found Britain with one of the worst—perhaps the worst—secret services in the world. The end of the combat found her with the best. Unfortunately, the supineness of politicians and the usual regard for false economy helped to disperse this unequalled organisation with lamentable rapidity. However, the thrill of the game survived, and, aided by a wealthy secret service man who had been a highly-skilled operator in his time, a nucleus of the best workers "carried on" quite unofficially. This small body was all "on its own." It did vast and invaluable work, but, being unofficial, could rely on neither help nor protection from any of the police or other services, and was unable to claim any diplomatic privileges in case of discovery. Members had to save themselves, or appeal to the headquarters of the organisation for help. If that was not forthcoming, they just disappeared. The latest joined member, as soon as his training was ended, found himself faced with a formidable job. A couple of German warships were paying a friendly visit to England, and a subversive organisation, run by Communists, had plotted to sink the vessels at anchor, much as the Maine had been sunk in Havana, and to plunge the two great Powers into war again. The averting of the plot, and the way that it was done, makes a story that merits being classed as a "thriller" of the very first water.

Turn of the Wheel. By Bligg Russell. Long. 7s. 6d. net.

Bitter Seed. By Jenetta Botibol. Long. 7s. 6d. net.

TWO novels by different authors suggest comparison, because one is about a good-for-nothing husband, and one about a good-for-nothing wife. Mr. Bligg Russell, in "Turn of the Wheel," shows a wife endeavouring to remain faithful to a husband who is by nature a gambler. He is a sort of small style Hatry in business, and gets two years' imprisonment. Personally, we were not impressed by his wife's behaviour during this period, but Mr. Russell, evidently, considers it more than satisfactory. Nina, at any rate, does receive Robert on his release, and tries to start life with him again; but he is the type that cannot learn from experience, and she is rather a fool. In the end it is made convenient for her to choose a preferable life. Apart from Nina's behaviour towards her husband in his trouble no ethical problem is presented in this novel.

In "Bitter Seed," by Jenetta Botibol, ethical problems are very prominent, but are handled in a curiously unsatisfying way. The husband is in this case the martyr, and the dice are so heavily loaded in his favour that his wife has not a hope of presenting her case. But the husband, for all his saintliness, seeks consolation elsewhere, and retribution falls heavily on him and his new love. It is doubtful whether the beastliness of his wife or the unnecessarily heavy penalty imposed by the author on him and his lady for their "sin" is the more improbable. Evidently Miss Botibol does not believe that we make our own heaven or hell, since she has punished her characters so ruthlessly.

I'd Do It Again. By Frank Tilsey. Secker. 7/6 net.

"I'D DO IT AGAIN" is an Anglicised version of "The Postman always Rings Twice." "The Postman" has been imitated many many times; but although Mr. Tilsey has bowed to the form of the original in certain passages which will not please the censors, he has written an individual, and entirely arresting novel. This is the story of a man who robs his employer as told by the man himself. He has a responsible position in a city office—and earns three pounds a week. He feels he is worth five, and determines to extract two pounds weekly to add to his wages. At first he is timid, continually panic-stricken, but gradually he perfects his method. And his own enterprise transforms his character. He becomes strong, confident, masterful. There are, however, terrifying shocks in store. A visit from detectives—but the detectives are not after him. The unexpected arrival of the auditors. This story is told in the first person, and it is as innocent of literary frills as a skeleton of flesh. Short, hurrying sentences moving forward ceaselessly towards new action. It has just the right twist at the end, where Mr. Tilsey might have descended to an ennobling prison sentence, and a fresh start as a pauper—but an honest one.

Anchor Man. By Fanny Heaslip Lea. Ivor Nicholson and Watson. 7/6 net.

Sailors are notoriously popular with women, so, perhaps, Miss Heaslip Lea may win new admirers with this novel about an American naval officer. John Cobb comes of a family with a great tradition in the Service, but he himself is too much of an individualist, too modern, to carry on the tradition. He is full of grit, courage and endurance, but he remains a thorn in the flesh of the American Navy by reason of his individualism. He is torn, in the meantime, between two girls, but Miss Right eventually succeeds in ousting her opponent.

Clinging Shadows. By Main Waring. Melrose. 7/6 net.

The way in which Leonard Elvey became an outcast from society is not satisfactorily presented. Either his alleged crime should have been more dreadful or his position in life more prominent. However, the author presents him as disgraced and seeking a livelihood under an assumed name. Every time he gets going well the shadow in his past appears again, and he has to up mast and away. His experiences are interesting and varied until his name is eventually cleared and he is free to propose to the girl he likes best.

Conversation in Heaven. By Rosamund Lawrence. Hodder and Stoughton. 7/6 net.

"Conversation in Heaven" is a curious mixture of fact and fancy. In it the author gives an exceptionally vivid, and what seems an authentic, account of a missionary household in a remote jungle in India. John and Marty Linklater are genuinely conceived, and impress us with their sincerity. Their friend, Dr. Fred Buch, a scientist, seems less real in the rôle of romantic hero. More fanciful still is the figure of Caroline Scott, who visits her old school friend, Marty, armed with the latest Parisian creations and a desire for the simple life after some tragedy with which she has met in Switzerland. Of course she marries the doctor, and is doomed by so doing to a jungle life of discomfort and loneliness. We feel less optimistic about the success of this union than the author.

THE LIBRARY CONFERENCE

A CONFUSION OF IDEALS

"NATIONALISM" OR CULTURE?

READING over the reports of the Library Association Conference, which was held in Limerick this week, I have been struck by the rather amusing confusion of ideals which seems to prevail in the Free State at the moment. In the first place, it is accepted without question by everybody that the more libraries we have the better. Provided always that the Censorship Board keeps a careful watch on any literature which may injure the morals of the people, books are welcomed warmly, and the lack of them deplored. The speakers at the conference might differ on minor points, but they were all agreed that the spread of the library movement in Ireland could do nothing but good. Figures were quoted to show the present condition of libraries in the country, and it was announced that an effort would be made to induce the Government to give regular financial help to Irish libraries, so that even the villages should not be without their supply of books. By this means, as the speakers rightly pointed out, culture would be spread, and the general standards of intelligence would be improved.

One does not quarrel with such a point of view, which seems to be entirely praiseworthy. The point, however, is that it will be recognised as praiseworthy by everybody in the Free State, including the large number of people who spend a good deal of their time in pressing towards an opposite goal. The spread of the library movement means that people will be given the chance to acquire closer contact with the ideas and the culture of other parts of the world (subject, of course, to a slight control by the Censors), whereas the ideal of modern political Ireland appears to be that real independence can be secured only by shutting out as much outside influence as possible and concentrating on ourselves.

"Foreign" dances, "foreign" games, "foreign" films and—oddly enough—"foreign" books have all been blamed in turn for the decay of national spirit and the decline of morals, and the official horror with which they are regarded leaves no doubt that many people would like to see them kept out of the country altogether. What has this attitude in common with the plea for more libraries, seeing that reading does not encourage the withdrawal of the mind upon itself, but rather a "spreading out" into every land and every kind of culture?

Mr. Fergus Murphy, who read one of the papers at Limerick, went as near to reconcile these two conflicting ideals as it would have been possible to go. He stressed the absence of a great literary heritage in Ireland—not recognising any of that great band from Goldsmith down to Yeats as having a claim to be described as Irish writers—and pleaded for the use of the Gaelic language in order to achieve a tradition. Like so many others, he viewed with extreme distrust "the disintegrating forces of foreign culture," but in almost the next sentence he remarked that "the increasing interest of the Irish public in art, literature, history and music augured well for the future." The whole paper leaves one in some doubt as to what Mr. Murphy would like the State to do about it. Is he pleading for a library service which shall be confined to books written in the Gaelic language, and, if not, how is he to prevent the readers from exposing themselves to the disintegrating forces of foreign culture?

Miss Roisin Walsh, who read another paper at the same meeting, puts the case for the libraries much more accurately, I think. In her mouth, the phrase "the library is an instrument of education" is a little more than the usual conventional tribute, because she is not afraid to draw the logical conclusions from it. Libraries, she says, can do a great deal to build up Gaelic culture, but she implies that they must not be confined to that task. "Some years ago," she adds, "some people in Ireland wanted to isolate this country from the rest of the world, in order that there would be created a new nation like the ancient Gaelic nation, but now they saw that it was not possible to keep out the rest of the world, and they would not attempt it." Actually, the attempt continues, but the other part of Miss Walsh's sentence is true enough. It is not possible to keep out the rest of the world, and those who seek to advance culture in this country will do nothing but damage to it if they try to shut the door.

A Novel Biography

Lord Inchcape's Life Story

James Lyle Mackay, First Earl of Inchcape. By Hector Bolitho. London: John Murray. 15/- net.

HERE is a biography which reads like a novel by John Galsworthy, thanks to the choice of a skilled and tasteful man of letters as biographer; indeed, it is more pleasing than a Galsworthy tale, since the real figure whom it depicts is more likeable than the sour types which Galsworthy favoured.

Lord Inchcape died aboard the yacht Rover at Monaco, exactly four years ago, at the age of eighty. He was then a millionaire—the greatest figure in the shipping world. To this he rose from quite humble beginnings. His father was a merchant sailor, of Arbroath, a sailors' town twelve miles from the Inchcape Rock, where the wicked pirate Ralph the Rover perished. This James Mackay brought corn from New Orleans to Galway during the famine of 1848, and carried Irish emigrants back across the Atlantic to Halifax. From Canada he brought a young wife, Deborah Lyle. He told his children how he had seen Robert Stevenson and his artificers return from their work on the famous Inchcape Lighthouse, and had seen Sir Walter Scott set out in a little boat to view that wild spot. Such were the tales that little James Lyle Mackay heard in childhood. In celebration of his eighth birthday the boy went to sea in his father's ship, the Asia, a barque of 300 tons. He went to Archangel at that tender age, and saw the flax barges bring their cargo to the quays. Four years later Captain Mackay's ship came home to Arbroath from Australia—but not its captain. The Scottish mariner had been lost; the boy was an orphan. Mrs. Mackay died soon afterwards.

President at Thirty

Young James, "fonder of boats than of books," now had to make his own way in the world. At the age of 13 he joined a firm of rope and canvas makers as a clerk. Early in his twenties he went to India, and there made his mark. He was President of Bengal Chamber of Commerce in his thirties, and Sheriff of Calcutta, invested with the C.I.E. "in recognition of extension of commercial relations between England and Ireland," before he was forty.

We will not follow his career in detail, though we must remark in passing on the beauty of his domestic life, happy in his marriage with the gracious lady who survives to mourn him. We must recall, too, in passing, the loss of his daughter in an effort to cross the Atlantic by air from East to West a year before the Irish-German team achieved that feat: a loss that haunted him so, that he would wake from reverie at table with the words: "I wonder how she died." The life story is one of grit, such as is told of many other poor Scottish boys who rose to eminence.

Hardness is said to have been the man's chief trait. He helped many and many a lad to a start, but he expected every one of them to work as hard as he had worked; he had no pity for the waster or slacker, as he would call one who frittered his opportunities.

A Regrettable Defect

Inchcape was not a man of intellect. His condemnation of missionary effort in China, which made a stir a few years before his death—we remember reporting it in these pages as well—was one of the most ill-founded utterances that bad logic ever committed. To condemn ill-considered missionary methods would be just enough, but Lord Inchcape simply begged the question when, professing himself loyal to Christianity, he yet said that Christianity had no right to evangelise. We might cite other examples of his erroneous judgment, expressed in a regrettable loose diction. Here we see the defects of the merits of the self-made, but ill-tutored, man.

Contracts in Millions

It was as a business man that Lord Inchcape served the State. It fell to him to take the lead at the very moment of war's outbreak in the marshalling of the merchant service in the service of a threatened island, and after the war it was he who handled contracts for the State running to £35,000,000, and sold 418 enemy steamers of 2,500,000 tons. As a business man he resisted Free Trade even after his startling conversion to Conservatism; for his experience of the world was in commerce, in shipping, those phases of British activity which throve on Free Trade and were its strength. He revised this judgment at last. Brought close to Britain's internal needs, he hauled down the Free Trade flag and supported Mr. Neville Chamberlain's measures of reform.

Lover of the Sea

The portraits of the man in the many interesting pictures in the volume are a story in themselves: in figure, much like Sir Harry Lauder; in feature, force of will hewn in strong lines; the eyes seeing little before the matter in hand; a kindly nature in the expression. To the last Lord Inchcape was in love with the sea. When he revisited the salt-aired seaport of his boyhood in old age, he was interested chiefly to mark the change in the fishing-craft, which now carried electricity. He was happiest on a yacht, and so died. The salt was in his blood; ships and their ways were the romance of his life. Here is the Scot—the type which Galsworthy could not draw—who carried through a life of hard activity a boy's heart.

The Labrador Dog, Its Home and History. By Lieutenant-Colonel George Scott and Sir John Middleton. London Witherby. 7/6 net.

OWNERS of representatives of the famous breed of Labrador retrievers will find here a most interesting history of the origin and development of this well-known sporting dog. When one considers the popularity of the breed to-day it is somewhat remarkable to read in the foreword by Mr. H. T. W. Bowell, Secretary of the Kennel Club, that in 1919 only 181 Labrador retrievers were registered at the Kennel Club. Since then, however, the registrations have increased steadily, and for the past twelve years more than a thousand a year have been registered. An interesting and exhaustive account is given of the origin of the Labrador dog. Despite its name, it is shown to be a direct descendant of the black water-dogs imported from Newfoundland. Along with the large Newfoundland dog, and the Chesapeake Bay dog which was shown in England for the first time in 1936, it is stated to be descended from dogs which were introduced to the island by the Devon fishermen who settled there in the beginning of the sixteenth century. Coming to recent times, the stock of British Labradors is carefuly traced from its ancestor, "Avon," born in 1885, and bred by the third Earl of Malmesbury. Photographs of this and other famous Labradors, together with pedigrees and a map of Newfoundland and the coast of Labrador, are included in the volume.

Conversation on Conrad

A Difficult Volume

Joseph Conrad: Some Aspects of the Art of the Novel. By Edward Crankshaw. London: The Bodley Head. 8/6 net.

IT is not for the novel reader that Mr. Crankshaw writes, but for the rare being who is of the elect, of the cognoscenti. His book is a critical study of some aspects of the novel as the art of novel-writing was practised by Conrad. If the study throws light upon Conrad's life and character or upon the contemporary novel as an art, that is all to the good. But if it does not, no matter; in studying the Conrad novel Mr. Crankshaw satisfies himself as a critic, and his satisfaction as a critic is his justification.

Mr. Crankshaw sees "that even among his friends Conrad is still very widely read, not as a novelist in his own right, but as a kind of exotic romancer who has made a corner in sea and jungle." "It is my belief," he adds, "that when he is restored to his proper place, to the front rank, that is, of English novelists of all ages, it will not be as anything so confined as a writer of exotic romances, but as a great novelist unclassified."

The Author Converses

To paraphrase or attempt to interpret Mr. Crankshaw would be to do him less than justice. He must be permitted to speak for himself, and that is exactly what he does in these pages—he converses upon Conrad the novelist. We may overhear his conversation by quoting some of his remarks. "An artist, a novelist, has something to communicate to the public, and this communication must naturally be made in the least wasteful, most effective manner possible . . . The form of a story is, or should be, the appearance of that story presented in its most telling way, and the technique of the novelist is the means and skill with which he makes his matter tell. . . . The primary end of this study, then, is to see how Conrad got his effects, to open the watch and gaze at the works."

A Great Novelist

Mr. Crankshaw believes that in the hand that assembled the works and set the watch going, and in the mind controlling it, in the specific instance of Conrad's novels, there was greatness. But, he goes on, "a conviction of this sort remains an opinion no matter how many others share it. And although in the course of these pages evidence will be adduced in support of that conviction, the interpretation of such evidence is wholly a subjective affair. This, of course, is a roundabout way of saying: 'I think Conrad was a great novelist, and I'll tell you why.'"

Conrad's Way

Another, and a final, quotation will illustrate Mr. Crankshaw's reasoning. "We are all of us," he declares, "to some extent psychologists, and Conrad was supreme—in the generally understood sense of the word," but not in the sense applying to Henry James, Maupassant, Flaubert or Ford Madox Ford. "It will suffice to say that Conrad was temperamentally incapable of revealing objectively (that word thrice underlined) the train of thought alien to himself. In his own way he could give us Emma Bovary as vividly as Flaubert, but not in Flaubert's way; in his own way he could have given us Tietjens, Macmaster and Valentine Wannop as well as Ford, but not in Ford's way; in his own way he could have given us Leopold Bloom as well as Joyce, but not in Joyce's way. He could never, as these three writers did, have given us a sustained vision of the world seen through the eyes of these characters together with all their hidden thoughts objectively recorded." What Conrad's way is, in the understanding of Mr. Crankshaw, the theme of this volume.

We have, perhaps, been lavish in quotation, but of set purpose—that Mr. Crankshaw's own words may tempt the reader to listen to the entire monologue. His patience will be rewarded.

Guide to Putting

The Short Game. By P. A. Vaile. London: Duckworth. 5s. net.

HERE is another book on golf which will either be blessed or cursed by those who cannot putt. It has been bought by 180,000 Americans who suffer this affliction, and, seemingly, it has been accepted as the cure for all evils. Mr. Vaile's teaching, at least, is revolutionary, even if one does have to wade through a good deal of conversation to get at it. In the first place, Mr. Vaile says that for the short game clubs must be short—something like 30 inches. This rule applies to putter, niblick and mashie niblick. Secondly, these clubs must be very heavy, and, thirdly, they must have square grips. He affirms that pitching and chipping merely are extensions of the putt, and, accordingly, they must be played as a putt. As for the execution of the putt, the pendulum swing is the ideal, and the method which reproduces this swing will be the most successful. The right wrist joint must be used as a hinge, and Mr. Vaile would have the right elbow against the flat of the right thigh. You must stay as near the ball as possible, crouching down over it for the shorter putts, and only coming up in order to get more power for the longer ones. The stance is slightly open, and the ball is played off the left heel. We have tried Mr. Vaile's suggested method, and it certainly does lend one confidence; but we should hate to be faced with a downhill putt on a baked seaside green armed with a 14 or 15 ounce putter.

Cosmopolitans

Three Books of Stories

Mirages. By R. B. Cunninghame Graham. Heinemann. 7/6 net.

Rodeo. By R. B. Cunninghame Graham. Heinemann. 8/6 net.

Cosmopolitans. By W. Somerset Maugham. Heinemann. 7/6 net.

HAVING published his first book as far back as 1896, and his last a short while before his death in 1936, it would be thought that R. B. Cunninghame Graham would be one of the best known of contemporary writers; yet, at the end of forty years' continuous writing—during which he published more than thirty volumes—he remained almost unknown. It is true that his work was highly appreciated by a comparatively small circle, but its qualities are such as ought readily commend it to the largest possible circle of readers.

It may be that the ordinary reader was frightened by the foreign phrases and the long foreign names with which Cunninghame Graham besprinkled his pages; but, if once the reader had got beyond that initial fright and read on, he would have found the foreign phrases translated, and the long names just an integral part of a colourful scheme. He once wrote that his horses, being unshod, left no traces on the sands; but in his books he has left to posterity not alone delightful entertainment, but sufficient hoofmarks by which to follow his career through the few parts of the world in which "progress" has not yet reduced everything to a drab uniformity. In the series of volumes which began with "Thirteen Stories" in 1900, and ended with "Mirages" a few weeks ago, Robert Bontine Cunninghame Graham—or Don Roberto, as he preferred to be called by his friends—will be found a store of such delightful reading that all who know it not should hasten to make acquaintance at once. They will find in "Rodeo," edited by another famous horseman, Mr. A. F. Tschiffely, an ideal introductory volume to the writings of a master.

Love of Spain

A Laird of Dumbartonshire, related to the Barony of Elphinstone, Robert Bontine Cunninghame Graham was born in 1852. He was reared by a Spanish grandmother, from whom he seems to have inherited that love of Spain and all things Spanish which characterised his life and coloured his writings. Much of his youth and early manhood was spent as a gaucho in the Argentine, from which he extracted such literature as only his friend, W. H. Hudson, could have known to be found there. Later he made his famous journey to the forbidden city of Mogreb-el-Acksa in the guise of a Turkish doctor, and made that contact with the Arabs which was the second abiding influence of his career. In his writings the four main streams are Spain, South America, Morocco, and that Scotland to which his nationalistic leanings veered in the end; but the most attractive stories and sketches, and those upon which his great gifts were lavished, are those which turn to South America and Morocco. It was, in effect, Spain and its attachments in Africa and America that inspired him. His little tales and sketches are incidents vividly described. They are the projected thoughts of a rather contemptuous hidalgo rather than the artful tales of the professional story-teller; but they have a directness and a sharpness of detail of the best etchings, and a style that is rich and exact, rhythmical and pictorial. Those who do not know his work have a joy awaiting them, to be discovered through this selection entitled "Rodeo."

Mr. Somerset Maugham

If Mr. Cunninghame Graham was a cosmopolitan so also is Mr. Somerset Maugham, who uses the title "Cosmopolitans" for his latest collection of "very short stories." Nothing more apart from the loose and vivid structure than these Somerset Maugham stories could well be imagined; every one of the Maugham stories is fashioned consciously by a consumate craftsman to produce exactly the effect that he desires. They were written mainly for an American magazine which imposed limitations of space, but every story in the volume is a model of its kind. "The Verger" is, surely, a masterpiece.

In a preface Mr. Somerset Maugham pleads that entertainment is, surely, the first requisite of a story; and in that plea he is undoubtedly correct. He can stand by judgment on that count, but for one reader the greater entertainment over a long period has been provided by that other traveller in time and space—R. B. Cunninghame Graham.

Shorter Notices

Playtime in Portugal. By John Gibbons. London. Methuen. 6s.

Down away in the southern parts of Portugal is a country just being "discovered" by tourists and more leisured travellers. The most fascinating part of this land is the province of Algarve, with its remains of Moorish civilisation, traditions of a great past and semi-African climate. Mr. John Gibbons has blazed a pioneer trail into this romantic country, and writes of his wanderings and adventures in his delightfully easy and humorous style that, somehow, seems to bring in so much that is relevant to his subject.

The Charm of the Timber House. By R. Furneaux Jordan. London: Ivor Nicholson and Watson. 2/6 net.

The advantages of the timber house and some facts in answer to the usual objections to it are set out by Mr. Jordan in this beautifully illustrated book. Fine examples of existing 17th, 18th and 19th century timber-built houses are shown in answer to fears about durability; immunity from dry rot is stated to be practicable; and mention is made that a recent survey of over a million houses in the United States, of which 75 per cent. were built of timber, showed that there were 1.65 fires for each hundred timber houses, compared with 2.43 fires for each hundred of brick or stone.

American Piebald

Mrs. Astor's Peculiar Horse

Mrs. Astor's Horse. By Stanley Walker. London: The Bodley Head. 12/6 net.

HERE are some gorgeous high lights from the well-lighted American scene. Mr. Walker, laconically derisive, gives the low-down on the great continent from Father Coughlan to fan-dancer Sally Rand; and to (or from) the Hauptmann trial from (or to) Swank in the Bathroom. He begins with a chapter entitled "The Bon Ton and the Revolution"—a poignant story of how the millionaires lost their millions and struggled for existence on a pittance in the hundred thousands. With their fortunes the millionaires lost the power to awe the ordinary mortal, so much so that a suspicion existed that society really revolved around the former speakeasy in West Fifty-second street, New York, an establishment known as "Jack and Charlie's." It seems that Mr. Jack Kriendler, talking to his lady friend over the telephone, interspersed his more romantic pleadings with farmyard noises like "Mooey, Mooey," and "Gooch, Gooch." The Bon Ton, at its (presumed to have existed) wit's end for relaxation, flocked to Mr. Kriendler to learn the proper inflection for "Gooch, Gooch." Political hostesses became "Toots" to their friends, and diplomats were pleased to be recognised as "palsy walsy." Mr. Walker believes that the President played a part in the promotion of this new brother and sister in arms atmosphere with "his smile and his fireside radio chats." Anyway, Mr. Roosevelt was asked, on the strength of his unexpected friendliness, to attend the opening of Jack Dempsey's new restaurant. Mine host considered that the presence of the President would make the première. Mr. Roosevelt, unfortunately, couldn't come.

The American Scream

On we prance through this collection of grotesque Americana. Civic welcomes in New York, a gangster's funeral, the radio and its overlord advertisement, Hollywood's dream children, the judging of Hauptmann, hitherto unrevealed facts about Valentino, and a chapter about Mae West which that astute business woman may, or may not, have shown to her lawyers. There is a photograph of Mae West saying good-bye to the warden of Welfare Island, immediately subsequent upon her release from the warden's care, that makes one stand quite, quite aghast at the genius of beauty specialists and dress designers. Even allowing for the limited conveniences of Welfare Island from the photograph, it seems that these experts in beauty had but little foundation upon which to build the vision that now may be seen upon the screen.

Quite incidentally Miss West says she "always thinks of the kiddies" in her pictures by putting in a scene they will like. A pleasant couple of years might be spent in trying to recall only one of these incidents; but Miss West likes prize-fighters, and perhaps the kiddies can extract some emotion from that.

By reading this book you will discover ample reason for its curious title.

Monasticism Revives

A Cloistered Company. By Henry Chester Mann. London: Burns and Oates. 6/- net.

ALL the world over monasticism is flourishing afresh. In forest, desert, lonely mountain-side or secluded valley the monks are again rebuilding, re-establishing themselves, and raising again those lovely buildings wherein beauty is allied to asceticism and spirituality. Values are crashing to-day in every country, and many men are finding the answer to their prayers in the calm of a monastery. The author gives an exquisite picture of monastic life, its seclusion and peace, yet its full life of work, prayer and meditation

Conditions in the Free State were under review at yesterday's meeting of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Belfast.—(Page 5).

GREAT BRITAIN

It was announced from 10 Downing street last night that Sir Samuel Hoare has been appointed First Lord of the Admiralty in succession to Viscount Monsell, resigned.—(Page 9.)

ABROAD

The Queen Mary left New York on the return trip of her maiden voyage at 3.55 p.m. (B.S.T.) yesterday.—(Page 10.)

One of the first tasks of M. Blum's Cabinet, which held its inaugural meeting yesterday, will be to deal with the spreading strikes in France.—(Page 9.)

SPORTING

At Manchester yesterday Emborough won the Manchester Cup.—(Page 12.)

FINANCIAL

London Stock Markets closed the long account on a subdued note, and there was an almost general fall in prices. There were a few bright spots.—(Page 14.)

The Treasury bill rate jumped to 15s. per cent., compared with 11s. 6d. per cent. last week. Discount rates were firm, three months' paper being advanced to ⅝ per cent.—(Page 14.)

In Dublin business was restricted. Alliance Gas moved up to 16 11-16. There was a sharp fall in B.A.T.—(Page 14.)

The Municipal Elections

A vitriolic and somewhat bombastic speech by the Minister for Industry and Commerce in Dublin last night reminds us that the municipal elections are near at hand. Nominations for the Dublin Corporation will be received on June 17th, and polling will take place on June 30th. There are five electoral areas in Greater Dublin, and the Corporation has thirty-five seats. Since the Commercial Register has been abolished every one of these electoral areas will have an additional seat, and the competition among the several parties is likely to be exceptionally keen. On this occasion the municipal elections in Dublin will be held on the new register. In other words, every man and woman in the area over the age of twenty-one will be entitled to vote. This change in the franchise will make an enormous difference. It is estimated that the number of voters in Dublin City and County will be increased to about 363,000—that is to say, there will be an increase of more than fifty per cent. on the numbers of the old register. This condition of affairs has been brought about deliberately by the present Free State Government. Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly, who introduced the necessary legislation in Dáil Eireann, made no secret of the fact that the new system would give a greater measure of voting power into the hands of young men and women who never previously have been qualified to take part in municipal elections; and that, by implication, the Fianna Fáil Party would benefit. For the thirty-five vacant seats on the Corporation there will be a fairly big number of candidates. The present Lord Mayor and at least one other will stand as Independents. Fianna Fáil will have twenty-five candidates, as against the United Ireland Party's twenty-three; and there will be nineteen Labour men. Apparently the election will be fought on the narrowest party lines. Mr. Lemass last night was quite frank about the matter. In his view, the capital city of a country with a Fianna Fáil Government ought to have a Fianna Fáil Corporation, and certainly neither he nor his political associates will be to blame if any other result is achieved.

The whole idea of a party-political contest for the Dublin, or, for that matter, any other Corporation, is deplorable. Mr. W. T. Cosgrave and his colleagues did the Free State a signal service when they refused to allow their own party to engage as such in elections for local authorities, and there can be no doubt that under their Administration the standard of conduct and efficiency on local boards marked an astonishing advance. The abolition of the Dublin Corporation and its substitution by three paid Commissioners taught a salutary lesson to those persons who were trying to use local boards as platforms for their party-political speeches, and public life in the Free State, taken all round, certainly improved almost beyond belief during the last years of the Cosgrave régime. Fianna Fáil has undone all that good work. Under the guise of an undiluted democracy it has re-introduced all the worst elements of political controversy into local government affairs. Now that the boys and girls of twenty-one will be entitled to vote, one can imagine what the new local authorities will be like. These children—for they are little more—know nothing, and care less, for the things that matter in local government affairs. They only know that Fianna Fáil has given them the vote, and that the legendary figure of "Dev" is concerned somehow in the coming elections. We may expect, therefore, that the Fianna Fáil Party will secure a greatly increased poll, not alone in Dublin, but throughout the Saorstát. Men and women will be elected, not because they are interested deeply in the affairs of their district, or because they have the civic sense highly developed, but merely because they are obedient to their party. It is a lamentable condition of affairs, for which Fianna Fáil alone is to blame. The Fine Gael Party, and even the Independents, have been forced against their wills to accept Fianna Fáil's challenge, and to nominate candidates on strictly party lines. We do not suppose that either Fine Gael or the Independents will be able to return nearly as many candidates as Fianna Fáil; but they must do their best in a contest that never was of their seeking.

To some extent the contests in Greater Dublin will centre around the personality of the present Lord Mayor, Alderman Byrne. Mr. Byrne has been Lord Mayor now for six years—since the rehabilitation of the City Council; and, although his period of office has been unusually long, we venture to say that Dublin never has had a Chief Magistrate of greater efficiency or more valuable qualities. Throughout his term in the Mansion House Alderman Byrne has preserved a sturdy independence which has won him golden opinions in all quarters. He never has forgotten the fact that, as Lord Mayor, he is the representative, not of a class, a creed or a party, but of all the citizens of Ireland's ancient capital. His capacity for hard work is almost incredible, and his popularity is without parallel in the annals of our city. We are convinced that no other man in Ireland to-day can replace Alderman Byrne as Lord Mayor. For that reason we regret very much that Mr. Lemass should declare publicly that a member of the Fianna Fáil Party ought to be chosen. A party politician at the Mansion House would be a calamity, and we hope very earnestly that no such candidate will be elected. The people of Dublin have the matter in their own hands. If they elect a Fianna Fáil majority, they will get a Fianna Fáil Lord Mayor, and they will deserve the consequences. We are quite certain, however, that, in spite of Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly's babes and sucklings, a Fianna Fáil majority can be avoided. In the past very large numbers of electors in Greater Dublin have neglected their civic duties. To put it crudely, they have been too lazy to vote. There never has been any kind of excuse for this attitude, but in the present circumstances abstention from the polls would be little less than criminal. If every constitutional voter should record his and her vote on June 30th, Fianna Fáil would receive a severe shock. Its plan to replace Alderman Byrne by a party nominee could be defeated; but, if the responsible voters continue to stay at home and confine their activities to subsequent grumbles, the affairs of the city will be handed over to Fianna Fáil.

Far Eastern Fears

The rebellious Cantonese Government has done something that threatens the whole of China with ruin. Some years ago the Cantonese seceded from the Central Government at Nanking, and established what has remained, to all intents and purposes, a separate State. Their defection has done much to weaken the Central Government, to which they never have accorded the slightest help, but to which, rather, they have been a constant annoyance. As it happens, however, the Cantonese Government is possessed of a far more fiery spirit than its superior in Nanking, and—largely, perhaps, because of its greater remoteness from the scene of trouble—is far less ready to endure Japan's incursions upon Chinese sovereignty. For some time past it has been breathing forth threatenings and slaughter against the Japanese invader; and of late there has arisen the ominous possibility that it might go to the length of a declaration of war. Now what everyone feared has come to pass. Technically, the Cantonese Government has not declared war upon Japan, but it has done very much the same thing—it has given orders for the mobilising of an expedition against the Japanese in North China. As a result, the Nanking Government is faced with a truly appalling dilemma. If it declines to support its rebellious sister, the nationalist feeling of "young China" will be outraged; tens of thousands of ardent anti-Japanese will flock to the banner of Canton, and Nanking will lose whatever useful support it still enjoys. On the other hand, if the Nanking Government gives this Cantonese movement its blessing, Tokyo at once will want to know the reason why. The Japanese will declare that they hold the Central Government responsible for this latest outbreak of "lawlessness"—which is to say, of the spirit of independence—and will declare it their own solemn duty to restore the order which Nanking has proved itself unable to maintain. Anybody can guess the sequel. The Japanese Army, one of the finest fighting machines of modern times, will advance further south into China, and a few more provinces—if not, indeed, the whole country—will be added to the Japanese Empire. China can raise without difficulty ten times as many men as Japan, but, in the face of that splendid organisation, they will be useless; China will be doomed, and exactly how much of the country will be occupied by Japanese troops will depend entirely on Tokyo's policy. The League of Nations, presumably, will continue to do nothing. Four years have passed since it formally condemned Japanese aggression against China—just as more recently it condemned Italy's invasion of another member-State—and, just as Italy has defied the League, so Japan defied it, and will continue to defy it. On this occasion, no doubt, it will have an additional argument to justify its pusillanimity—it will be able to plead that the Cantonese, if not the Chinese as a whole, have been the aggressors. Thus, without making a move, Geneva can maintain the letter of the Covenant. Nobody cares any longer about its spirit.

The Stratosphere

It is hard to realise that men have been exploring the stratosphere for several years; but the fact is brought home when one reads that this newest field of adventure is being turned already to practical purposes—as an observation ground. There will be an eclipse of the sun on the 10th of next month, and a party of Soviet astronomers proposes to view it from a height of six miles above the earth's surface. True, at this height they will not be in the stratosphere proper, which does not begin for several miles more, but, at the least, they will be higher than if they were on the summit of the highest mountain on earth. Their balloon will have an observation window at the top of its fabric, which may be reached by a ladder extending from the gondola. It is expected that they will obtain some really remarkable photographs; for at the height of six miles the atmosphere, which prevents accurate observation from the earth, will be substantially diffused; cloud or fog will have ceased to be a nuisance, and there will be no hindrance from particles of dust. If the experiment succeeds—and far more arduous ascents have been accomplished in safety—science ought to be the gainer by the most careful of all solar observations thus far made. Professor Piccard, the stratospheric pioneer, and his successors from many nations already have added considerably to the world's knowledge; the new experiment will add more. The next step will be the utilisation of the stratosphere as a channel of transport. Writers of fiction have depicted a future in which great 'planes, hurtling through the stratosphere, and meeting none of the resistance which is so great a problem in the atmosphere, will make the journey from Europe to America in a few hours, and will circumnavigate the globe in less than a day. Perhaps, the reality is closer than even those writers imagine; almost certainly their dream will have come true in the lifetime of many people now living. Who can contemplate the vast strides which air travel has made within the last twenty years, and still can doubt that even more startling changes will occur within the next two decades?

Frocks for Boxers

Next Friday Joe Louis will box in New York, and, as a matter of purely fleeting interest, it has been arranged that Max Schmeling will join him in the ring. To increase the attendance to those comfortable proportions whereat the police have to be called in with blackjacks to protect the women and children, the fight promoters have circulated a report that Mr. Louis is failing to slay his sparring partners with one blow. This clever manœuvre gives the coming fight a novel interest; since now it must be uncertain if Mr. Louis will take three, four or five seconds to negotiate the Schmeling step on the ladder of fame, and (particularly) fortune. We, however, have an even better idea to make next Friday's assassination more of a struggle; and we owe our inspiration to Fate. In Australia all is rush and bustle in preparation for the Olympic Games, and so violent is the rush and bustle that the organisers addressed two letters wrongly. The two letters were intended for the woman high jumper and the heavy-weight boxer, and, in essence, these letters informed the two athletes of their official inclusion in the Australian team. Furthermore, the letters gave warning to the members that they must supply their measurements for cream trousers and a white frock, respectively. As things turned out, the lady high jumper thought it was nice of Australia to supply her with cream trousers; and the heavy-weight boxer went round with fingers slightly hooked looking for the man, or men, who had offered him a white dress. Eventually, at a distance of several yards, they succeeded in explaining the postal error to the boxer, and the matter was smoothed out; but here is the very thing for Mr. Louis. Put Mr. Louis in a white dress for the fight in the Yankee Stadium. In the first place, the army would have to be called out to control the crowds; and, secondly, the white dress might reduce the "Brown Bomber" from a fighting machine to a worried young man in the wrong clothes. Of course, our suggestion would become rather laughable if Max Schmeling wins next week.

COURT AND PERSONAL

The King received a deputation from the Grand Lodge of Freemasons yesterday afternoon at Buckingham Palace. Many important members of the Order were present.

Many changes are said to be pending in the Royal Household. Colonel Sir George Crichton, it is understood, will retire from the post of Comptroller, which he has filled so successfully for some time. In the absence of the Earl of Cromer, he was responsible for the duties of Lord Chamberlain at the funeral of King George.

The Princess Royal, who has made a good recovery from her recent attack of measles, did not accompany the Earl of Harewood to the 4th of June celebrations at Eton, where their son, Viscount Lascelles, is a pupil. The Hon. Gerald Lascelles was with his father, and was greatly interested in the day's proceedings.

Princess Alice and the Earl of Athlone are expected to return to Kensington Palace from the Continent early next week. Princess Helena Victoria and Princess Marie Louise will attend the variety performance at the Duke of York's Theatre on Monday, which has been organised by Mr. Owen Nares in aid of the Margaret Street Hospital, of which the Marchioness of Tickfield is President.

The Duchess of Abercorn visited Limavady on Thursday, and named the new boat of the Bann Rowing Club, and was later entertained at tea in the club garden. The Duchess will accompany the Duke of Abercorn when he leaves Government House for London, where they will be in residence at 68 Mount street, W. Viscount and Viscountess Esher returned to London yesterday from the country.

The influx of foreign visitors into London continues, but most interest centres in the Emperor of Ethiopia, who has not yet decided on the length of his stay in England. Princess René de Bourbon has arrived from Paris. Princess Solms-Baruth and Countess Fredricka Luise Solms-Baruth are staying in Staffordshire, where they are the guests of Mrs Hall and Mr. Thomas Hall at Broughton Hall. Mrs. Thomas Russell and Miss C. Russell have arrived from Cairo, and will be joined later in the summer by Russell Pasha. The birthday of the Maharaja of Mysore was celebrated by a dinner party at the Dorchester Hotel, Park lane, at which many distinguished Indian guests were present.

The High Commissioner in Egypt, Sir Miles Lampson, and Lady Lampson made their journey by aeroplane from Egypt to London, where they arrived on Thursday. They were accompanied by Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, and will spend some time in London.

Lord St. Audries and his mother, Lady St. Audries, who have been paying visits in County Meath, returned to England last week.

Lord and Lady Revelstoke have returned to London, having spent Whitsuntide on Lambay Island.

Lord Bellew arrived in Dublin yesterday from London.

Lord and Lady HolmPatrick have left Abbotstown, County Dublin, for England for a few weeks.

Lord and Lady Decies have arrived in London from the Continent.

The marriage arranged between Mr. David Coyle, T.C., P.C., and Miss Eileen Buckley, Mus.Bac., A.R.C.M., will take place quietly at the Church of the Three Patrons, Rathgar, on Wednesday, June 24th.

LONDON LETTER

THE FLIGHT FROM THE FRANC

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON.
FRIDAY NIGHT.

The situation in France may have extensive repercussions in other countries. The industrial unrest, of which the strikes in Paris are evidence, is not likely to have any great effect here, but this country is concerned about the financial position. So far, the British authorities' vigorous operations have saved the franc from more serious depreciation, and, at the same time, have given assistance to Swiss and Dutch currencies, but the flight from the franc may extend to more pronounced proportions, in which case even the strong British assistance may not prevent a position of grave international importance. British bank notes are being hoarded in France in increasing amounts, and there is a regular traffic from Paris to London by people anxious to exchange into British currency. M. Blum will be hard pressed to find a solution to the many-sided problem with which he is faced.

The Exiled Emperor

Haile Selassie, who was accompanied by his sons and a small suite, including Dr. Martin, the Abyssinian Minister in London, placed a big wreath, tied with the red, green and yellow colours of Ethiopia, upon the Cenotaph this morning. Several hundred people waited in Whitehall to watch the little ceremony, and gave the Emperor a cheer when it concluded. Mr. Anthony Eden paid a visit, said to be of an official character, to the Emperor at the Ethiopian Legation this afternoon, and it is understood that Haile Selassie's future activities in this country were defined clearly in the course of the conversation. The Emperor will leave London shortly for Switzerland, but it is thought unlikely that he will go to Geneva for the meeting of the Council of the League of Nations on June 30th, since he does not intend to take a personal part in the discussions. Mr. Lloyd George is among the politicians who have accepted an invitation to the reception which the Emperor is giving to the Diplomatic Corps to-morrow, but the Brazilian, French and Belgian Ambassadors are not likely to be present.

South Africa's Defences

South Africa's Minister for Railways, Harbours, Airways and Defence, Mr Oswald Pierow, will arrive in London on Monday for a short visit, in the course of which he will meet Sir Thomas Inskip, the Minister for Co-ordination, and the leaders of the aeroplane industry. Mr Pierow is organising a great air force for the Union of South Africa, and, as a result of the success attained by tanks during the Italian campaign in Abyssinia, he also is building up a big anti-tank corps. Mr. Pierow uses aeroplanes whenever he can, and flies regularly from Pretoria to Cape Town. Although he is coming to Britain by ship, he intends to fly back to South Africa in one of the aeroplanes built here for the Defence Force.

The Budget Insurances

A special meeting of the underwriters connected with the Bates Budget insurances was held in the library at Lloyd's this afternoon, when Mr. Crocker, the solicitor, who has already conducted investigations for certain underwriters, was invited to address those present, and to explain what legal implications or difficulties would be involved in the acceptance or rejection of the refunded money. After some consideration the underwriters agreed to accept the return of the money. In political circles to-day it was rumoured that Mr. J. H. Thomas and Sir Alfred Butt might resign their parliamentary seats very soon, though they may be present for the Tribunal debate in the House of Commons next week.

A New General

Major-General J. D. Dill, who was chosen to represent the British Army at the much-discussed peace talks with France and Belgium, has been promoted General at the early age of fifty-five. His promotion means retirement from his present post of Director of Military Operations and Intelligence at the War Office, but it is certain that an important command not far from London will be provided for him almost immediately. General Dill possesses a unique knowledge of military affairs in Europe, and has made a close study of recent military developments in Germany. He will be succeeded at the War Office by Major-General R. H. Haining, at present Chief of the Imperial Defence College, who is also an expert in intelligence work.

The Trade Unions

It is interesting to notice that of late there has been a marked revival of trade unionism. This revival is so surprising in its extent that the officials at the headquarters of the unions are wondering what it means. The engineers show the most striking development, but it is ascribed to the men's desire to get into a union, with a view to reaping any benefit that may accrue in the way of extra work and wages due to the demand for armaments. All round, however, there is an increase in the membership of unions. When the Trades Union Congress meets at Plymouth in the autumn its membership will be larger than it has been for the past five or six years.

Flag Days

London has had such a number of flag days of late that many people will be glad to hear that a movement has been started for a common flag day for the London hospitals, and a sub-committee has been set up to consider the question. Nearly every day has been a flag day for some weeks past, and though the police have done their utmost to limit them they have felt obliged to give chances to charities whenever possible. It is not only the public which resents this continued appeal, but many of those who have taken part in the work have ceased to be enthusiastic, while many national organisations have received strong protests from their branches against being asked to carry out flag days in local centres. Flag days in London raised last year a total of nearly a quarter of a million pounds. On the other hand, it is pointed out that flag days are costly, since on occasions the expenses amount to 12½ per cent. of the amount raised. In the United States the authorities make a concerted appeal once a year for the local community chest, when a great effort is put forward, and the money is allotted on a proportionate basis to all local charities. Now that the big London hospitals have made a move, something will be done to ease a situation which has become almost an annoyance.

FIRST TASK OF M. BLUM

SETTLEMENT OF FRENCH STRIKES

APPEAL FOR PATIENCE AND ORDERLINESS

CONCESSIONS TO WORKERS IN PROPOSED LEGISLATION

M. LEON BLUM, the first Socialist Prime Minister in France, held his first Cabinet Council meeting yesterday. The first question they got down to was the matter of the "stay-in" strikes. M. Blum read his Ministerial declaration, which he is to read to the Chamber.

On the subject of the strikes, he said, he proposed introducing legislation providing for a 40-hour week, holidays with pay, collective labour contracts, nationalisation of the war industries, and a revision of the 10 per cent. cuts in civil servants' pay and ex-Service men's pensions

A communiqué, issued after the meeting, stated:—"The Cabinet Council approved the terms of the Ministerial declaration. The Government considered how the measures contained in it may be speedily put into effect. The Government assures the country once more of its determination to spare no effort to bring the strike to a speedy and satisfactory conclusion."

The Minister of Labour has seen a representative of Hachette's, with a view to the resumption of the distribution of newspapers. The Government's attitude to the strikers appears to be one of sympathy with their claims, combined with an appeal to be patient and orderly.

So far as it was known last night, the Government's declaration will not detail the Government's financial programme. At the same time, the drain of gold, the weakness of the franc, and the state of the Treasury render prompt financial measures essential.

It is generally expected that the Government will propose the reform of the statutes of the Bank of France, to enable the bank to give its chief customer—the State—more liberal crdit. One thing is certain, the Government must find huge sums of money to finance its public works and replenish the Treasury, while the Budget will be depleted by the loss on the revision of the salary and pension cuts.

FOOD PROBLEM GRAVE

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Friday.

To-day saw very little improvement in the great wave of "stay-in" strikes which has swept France, despite an eloquent and conciliatory broadcast appeal to the strikers by M. Blum, the new Premier.

While the strikes are still spreading rapidly in the provinces the food problem remains the gravest aspect of the situation, as far as Paris is concerned. Beyond slight changes in their menu, and increased prices, Parisians cannot be said to have suffered any really grave inconvenience so far, but transport difficulties may create a serious situation.

Public transport services, including 'buses, tubes and taxis, were working normally to-day, but the strike was brought home to the man in the street very forcibly this evening, when the employés in some of the largest department stores decided not to go home.

NIGHT AT THE COUNTERS

At the Galeries Lafayette, the Printemps, the Samaritaine and the Louvre, among other big stores, the workers are spending the night at their counters.

Restaurants to-day served carrots and root vegetables instead of green vegetables, and tinned instead of fresh fruit. To-morrow they will probably have to compose meatless dishes; for the employés of the Villette slaughterhouses, which supply virtually the whole of Paris, have downed tools.

The shortage of newspapers has distressed many people. Only one Socialist and one Communist paper appeared to-day, and there was a rush to buy the limited copies available to read the names of the new Cabinet.

The inhabitants of St. Germain and district, who were deprived of hot lunches and dinners through lack of gas yesterday, were able to have coffee for breakfast this morning, the gas workers having returned to their jobs at an early hour.

FOOD PROBLEM

The food problem may become serious. Although the transport workers who bring perishable goods from the goods-yards to the markets have resumed work, the petrol shortage may limit their activities. Moreover, the employés of the wholesale merchants dealing in fruit and vegetables have now struck, and as a result there is a lack of these commodities in retail shops.

The workers are now taking steps to adapt themselves to the new conditions they have created. They are, in many cases, occupying the works in relays, so as to let their companions go home to meals.

At Lens the strike of men who work the railways in the mines has resulted in a total cessation of the output of coal and temporary unemployment for 18,300 miners. There is, however, a still graver aspect to this strike; for Lens coal is used on the spot to produce power and lighting for a huge area, stretching as far south as Creil (Oise). Lens also produces gas for Lille, Roubaix and Tourcoing, where the supply is threatened.

SPREADING STRIKE

Large numbers of miners have come out at Anzin, Lievin, Somain, Denain, and other places.

The strike is rapidly spreading to the industrial towns in the north. At Lille 60 more factories stopped work to-day, making a total of about 200. There are 25,000 strikers at Valenciennes, 5,000 at Douai, and the total for the far north is put at 100,000.

About 3,000 shipyard workers have come out at Havre; 2,500 employés of the Dunlop factory have struck at Montlucon, while Bourges, Chartres, Rheims, Maubeuge, Arras and Rouen all report an increased number of strikers.

The strike is extending to the laboratory staffs in the pharmaceutical trade.

There is still no threat of a stoppage of electricity and gas in Paris, and the strike at the Villette slaughter houses is stated to be on the way to a settlement.

GOLD FOR NEW YORK

CHERBOURG, Friday.

Two consignments of gold, weighing a total of 19,022 kilogrammes—roughly 17 tons—and valued at 303 million francs (about £4,000,000), are being shipped in the Hamburg-America liner Deutschland, consigned to two New York banks.

FREE STATE SUCCESS AT OLYMPIA

LADY McCALMONT UNLUCKY

SPECIAL TELEGRAM.

LONDON, Friday.

It was Clontarf's turn to score at the International Horse Show, Olympia, to-day. Ridden by Captain Corry, of the Department of Defence, the gelding was among seven competitors out of a large field which completed the course faultlessly, and shared first prize. Clontarf struck his best form, and never looked like failing.

The other competitors with clear rounds were composed as follows:—Three French officers, two British riders and one Belgian.

Other Free State horses in the contest were:—Blarney Castle (Captain Aherne), eight faults; Glendalough (Commandant O'Dwyer), eight faults, and Duhallow (Captain Corry), four faults.

Another Irish competitor gave a splendid display of horsemanship, and was robbed of a place among the first seven by an amazing piece of bad luck. Lady Helen McCalmont, of Thomastown, Co. Kilkenny, riding side-saddle, cleared the first seven difficult obstacles in perfect style, and a faultless round seemed certain. Just as her gelding, Beaufrere, was about to take the final jump someone in the audience misguidedly shouted encouragement. Beaufrere appeared momentarily startled, and took the top bar off the jump, costing Lady Helen four points. The audience realised her misfortune, and gave her a rousing cheer.

Mr. Samuel Lowe, of Auburn terrace, Athlone, who died on 25th December last, left personal estate in England and the Irish Free State valued at £5,590.

HEAVY SENTENCE ON FRANCISCAN

IMMORALITY IN A MONASTERY

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

BERLIN, Friday.

Sentence of six years' penal servitude, with ten years' loss of civil rights, was passed on Brother Bernhard Schulenberg, of the Ebernbach Monastery.

He is one of the 276 Franciscan priests and brothers who are on trial on charges of immorality.

Nine charges of immorality, committed between 1928 and 1933, were preferred against Brother Bernhard.

The prosecution alleged that one person had committed suicide in 1932, while another had fled from the monastery and committed burglary in order to escape the "torture by the accused."

ITALIANS STILL BOMBING

'PLANES ATTACK NATIVE VILLAGES

"TIMES" TELEGRAM.

KHARTOUM, Friday.

A report from Abyssinia indicates that the Italians intend the rapid occupation of the whole country. Columns are said to be approaching the Blue Nile, near the Sudan frontier.

Eighteen villages in the Kwara district, west of Lake Tana, were heavily bombed recently because Fitorari Mangasha refused to descend from the mountains to surrender arms within three days of an ultimatum.

MOBILISATION ORDERS

ACTION BY CANTON

EMBARRASSING TO NANKING

NOT DECLARATION OF WAR

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

HONG KONG, Friday.

ORDERS for the mobilisation of an expedition against the Japanese in North China were given to-day by the South West Political Council, or Government of Canton.

At the same time the Council issued a mandate appointing Generals Chen Chi-tang and Li Chung-yen, respective leaders of the South China provinces of Kwangtung and Kwangsi, to be Commanders-in-Chief of the First and Fourth Groups of the Armies of the "Peoples' Anti-Japanese National Salvation Forces."

This mandate does not constitute a declaration of war against Japan, which would prove immediately disastrous to Canton, in view of the overwhelming superiority of the Japanese in arms. What it does mean is that by proclaiming themselves "Anti-Japanese Salvation Forces" Canton gains popular sympathy from the Patriotic Youth movement against Japan, and at the same time succeeds in embarrassing General Chiang-Kaishek, the Chinese Premier, and the Central Nanking Government.

MAY DRIVE NORTH

The probabilities are that the Cantonites will drive northward along the Hukuang railway, with Hankow as their objective, while the Nanking Government will be faced with the dilemma of being unable to attack them for fear of alienating public sympathy, and yet, as the Central Government, being responsible to Japan for Canton's action.

In Canton this evening the utmost excitement prevails. Press gangs have appeared in the streets, and are actively at work, while the police are rigorously suppressing political discussions among the public.

Precautions against disorders are being tightened up, and it is expected that martial law will be proclaimed shortly. Food prices are soaring, and the inhabitants of Canton are hoarding what stocks they can procure.

The currency situation is also expected to become considerably worse to-morrow when the Council's mandate is published. Meanwhile, reservists are being called up, and troops are being continually despatched to the northern borders of Kwantung in readiness for an advance.

IN CASE OF EMERGENCY

A message from Shanghai states that the Japanese authorities in Canton have ordered their nationals to be ready to evacuate the town at a moment's notice in case of emergency.

According to Japanese reports from Canton to Tokyo, vanguards of combined Kwangsites and Cantonese have already invaded the North China Province of Hunan, but this has not been confirmed. It is certain, however, that there must be important developments during the next few days, when the Nanking Government is forced to declare its hand.

Both the alternatives it is faced with seem to spell disaster. If it declares against Canton, the Central Government loses a large amount of the country's support, and civil war would seem inevitable, while a declaration for Canton could only mean a ruinous war with Japan.

ACCIDENT TO R.A.F. 'PLANE

PILOT OFFICER AND AIRCRAFTMAN INJURED

Pilot Officer Harold Morley Starr was severely injured when a two-seater fighter 'plane crashed in a field at Stratton St. Margaret, near Swindon, yesterday. His passenger, Second Class Aircraftman T. W. McCarthy (526833), was slightly injured.

Both men were taken to Swindon Hospital. They belong to the Army Co-operation Squadron, Old Sarum. They passed over Swindon just before the accident occurred.

Although the petrol tank burst, the 'plane did not catch fire.

Pilot Officer Starr received leg and chest injuries, and also a fracture of the base of the skull.

An Air Ministry official last night stated that the machine was taking part in ordinary flying training.

At the Victoria Hospital, Swindon, last night, Pilot Officer Starr was stated to be "very ill." Aircraftman McCarthy was discharged after treatment.

EARLY MORNING FIRE IN DUBLIN

CINEMA BLAZE MENACES ADJOINING BUILDINGS

The Electric Cinema, Talbot street, Dublin, was severely damaged by fire early this morning.

The fire broke out at about one o'clock, and after a short while became so severe that residents of the houses beside the cinema were advised to vacate them lest the flames should spread.

The Fire Brigade succeeded in confining the fire to the front portion of the cinema, which was almost completely destroyed.

BRITAIN'S NEW FIRST LORD

SIR SAMUEL HOARE APPOINTED

HIS REMARKABLE CAREER

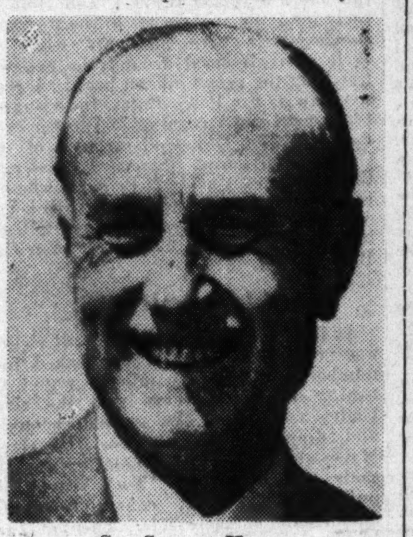
SIR SAMUEL HOARE, who resigned the office of Foreign Secretary some six months ago, has been appointed First Lord of the Admiralty.

The appointment was announced in the following statement, issued last night from No. 10 Downing street:—

> "The King has approved that Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Samuel Hoare, M.P., be appointed First Lord of the Admiralty, in place of Viscount Monsell, resigned."

TURN OF THE WHEEL

It was in December last—within a month after the Government had been returned to power by an overwhelming majority—that Sir Samuel Hoare resigned on the rejection of the proposals, known as the Hoare-Laval plan, for the settlement of the dispute between Italy and Ethiopia. M. Laval at that time was Prime Minister of France, and the proposals were drawn up as the result of conferences during Sir Samuel Hoare's visit to Paris. Their premature disclosure in the Parisian newspapers created a sensation in England, and, indeed, in interested countries on the continent.



SIR SAMUEL HOARE.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Baldwin) found himself the target of attack by questions aimed from every quarter of the House. For a time he seemed to favour the Hoare-Laval plan—at all events he strove to justify Sir Samuel Hoare, and hinted that he could quite justify the course pursued in Paris if once his hands, then tied by circumstances, were set free.

RESIGNATION

Then suddenly the tide of indignation swelled; the opposition waxed so strong that Mr. Baldwin had to bow before it and disown the Hoare-Laval proposals. Sir Samuel Hoare had no choice left but to relinquish office. He faced the House of Commons, and in a speech of singular sincerity and dignity he justified his part in formulating the proposals that had been denounced. The House was deeply moved, and it was felt that, while Sir Samuel's resignation was inevitable, his return to office could not be long delayed.

Sir Samuel is no stranger to the cares of office. Just before his short-lived tenure of the Foreign Office he was Secretary of State for India, and had piloted the complicated Government of India Bill through the Commons with conspicuous success. From 1922 to 1924, and from the latter year to 1929, he was Secretary for Air in Mr. Baldwin's Cabinet.

His achievements, however, were not confined to politics. He played no small part in the War, his activities including secret service in Russia, while in the conquest of the air his name is linked with the first civil flight to India.

A MOTORING SURPRISE

LE MANS RACE POSTPONED

The Le Mans 24 hours' race, which was fixed to take place on the Sarthe Circuit on June 13th and 14th, has been postponed on account of the various strikes which are taking place in France at the present time.

The race had attracted large entries from Germany, Great Britain and France, the greatest number being from Britain, and including one Irish team—J. D. Barbour and John Carr, of Belfast, with an Austin.

VON STUCK EQUALS SHELSLEY RECORD

Hans von Stuck, the Austrian racing driver, practising at Shelsley Walsh, Worcestershire, yesterday, for the hill climb there to-day, equalled the present record of 39 3-5 seconds, held by Raymond Mays since last year.

It was the Austrian's third climb. His first was 40 seconds and his second 40.5. May's best time yesterday was 40.5.

After von Stuck's fine time officials of the Midland Automobile Club were persuaded to keep the hill open for a further hour for practice. In 1930 von Stuck took the record out of England when he climbed in 42 3-5 seconds.

A NEW PROFESSOR

We learn that Dr. O'Donel Thornley Dodwell Browne, M.B., F.R.C.P.I., has been nominated to the vacant King's Professorship of Midwifery in the University of Dublin. This appointment is in the hands of the Royal College of Physicians in Ireland.

NEW SENATE PLAN

COMMISSION TO BE SET UP

MEMBERS TO ACT AS INDIVIDUALS

REPORT NOT LATER THAN OCTOBER

THE following statement was issued by the Government Information Bureau last evening:—

"The terms of reference and personnel of the proposed Commission which is to be asked by the Government to consider and make recommendations on the functions, powers and constitution of a Second Chamber (in the event of its being decided to make provision in the Constitution for such a Second Chamber) will be announced next week.

"Whilst members of the Commission are being chosen from groups and parties, it is to be clearly understood that such members will act in an individual capacity and not as delegates from any groups or parties with which they may be associated.

"The Commission will decide its own procedure, including whether it is to sit in camera or in public, and it will be asked to report as soon as possible, but not later than October 1st, 1936.

"The report of the Commission will be presented to the Executive Council, and, after due consideration, published in the usual way. Should legislative proposals follow, the responsibility for such proposals will, of course, rest entirely upon the Government."

THE REPORT

BY OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

The above statement in some measure answers queries put forward in yesterday's Irish Times. It is now clear that it is to be a Commission, and not a Committee; that its members, while acting for political parties, or groups, are expected, while sitting on the Commission, to forget about their political affiliations; that the Commission will sit in private or in public as it is itself disposed; that its report will be presented to the Executive Council and published in the usual way.

With regard to publication, a question is asked as to what is "the usual way" for publication. The reports of ordinary Committees or Commissions are invariably handed to the Press for publication; but this is a constitutional Commission in regard to which there are few precedents. It is recalled that the report of the Commission which made proposals for the first Constitution for the Free State was presented to the Provisional Government at the time, but never was given to the public, either by the late Government or the present Government. It is true, however, that portions of it have been disclosed in debate from time to time.

LOOKING AHEAD

A curious feature of the statement is that, while the Commission is asked to make recommendations as to the powers and constitution of a Second Chamber, it is quite clearly indicated that no decision has yet been come to as to whether there will be a Second Chamber at all. It is also uncertain whether any legislative proposals will follow.

In view of the setting up of the new Commission it is of interest to recall the names of the Constitution Committee which sat to consider and recommend a plan for the first Constitution. They were—Mr. Michael Collins, who was designated as Chairman, but was able to attend only a few meetings; Chief Justice Kennedy, Mr. A. O'Rahilly, Mr. James G. Douglas, Mr. Justice Murnaghan, Mr. Justice O'Byrne, Mr. James McNeill and Mr. Darrell Figgis.

NEW FRENCH GOVERNMENT

A GERMAN VIEW

BERLIN, Friday.

"The German people hopes that the new French Government will contribute its share towards solving the problem of the peaceful development of the peoples of Europe, which should not be subject to changes of personality and Government."

This is the comment in political circles to-night on the new French Government. It was added:—"Certain slogans used by the Popular Front will remain without effect on Germany so long as they are confined to home consumption."

TWO DEAD IN TRAIN SMASH

PARIS-VIENNA EXPRESS DERAILED

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Friday.

The Paris-Vienna express, which left Paris at 10 o'clock last night, was derailed this evening between Edelsberg and Linz, according to messages received here.

Two people are reported to be dead and six seriously injured. Breakdown trains and ambulances have been sent from Vienna.

The accident occurred at a point where the permanent way is under repair, and it is alleged that the express failed to slow down sufficiently.

Six men died in New York yesterday from poisoned alcohol following a night-long drinking party in a local junk yard. The police believe that the liquor was purchased from a local paint stores.

BOYLE MURDER RECALLED

MAN ARRESTED IN SCOTLAND

FOUND LATER WITH SEVERE WOUNDS

A MAN was arrested in a main street at Coatbridge, Scotland, during the busy shopping hour yesterday in connection with the death at Boyle, Roscommon, last autumn, of Patrick Henry, a sixty-five years old Irish-American.

The man was taken to the police station, where shortly afterwards he was found to be suffering from severe wounds in the throat.

Twelve stitches were inserted before the man was taken to Glasgow Royal Infirmary, where he lies in a serious condition. The hospital authorities believe that he will recover.

Henry's body was found in December in the house in which he lived, the discovery being made when the owner called to collect the rent. Henry had apparently been dead about three months. The body was lying across a peat fire, and death was due to head injuries. There were blood stains on the floor and splashes of blood on a bedstead.

PALESTINE DISORDERS

JEWS TO CLAIM COMPENSATION

EXPLOSIVES STOLEN FROM GOVERNMENT

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

JERUSALEM, Friday.

FRESH precautions are being taken against the smuggling of arms into Palestine, where shootings, explosions and arson—resulting from the Arab strike, now of seven weeks' duration—continue to be reported.

The wounding by British and Palestinian constables of two Jews found in the illegal possession of arms; the recovery by police dogs of explosives stolen from a Government magazine, and an attempt to blow up a railway bridge between Haifa and Lydda figure among the latest reports from different parts of the country.

Telephone lines were cut and shots fired last night.

The Jewish Agency is undertaking registration of Jewish deaths, and also of property damaged during the disturbances, in order to submit claims to the Government for compensation.

An order calling up reservists of the Trans-Jordan Frontier Force, whose services are believed to be required chiefly for guarding the borders and preventing the smuggling of arms, has been issued by the officer commanding.

Four Arabs have been arrested as a sequel to the discovery of explosives stolen from the Government magazine. With remarkable audacity they had dug a trench under the barbed wire fence surrounding a Government magazine, situated close alongside a British police camp, broken the door of a store, and made off with seven boxes of gun cotton and seven sacks of gunpowder.

FROM "THE TIMES"

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT.)

UNITY OF THE SERVICES

The Times in the course of a leading article to-day observes:—It seems strange that some of those who have been most quick to point out that the Minister for the co-ordination of defence is overburdened should hasten to distract his attention to matters of machinery before he has been given time to explore the problem of strategic policy. Anything that can be done to lessen the points of friction is to be welcomed, and here there may be scope for the tact and impartial judgment of the Minister for co-ordination, working in consultation with both parties. But in contrast to the prospects of such genuine mutual agreement, it is likely that any radical change would merely transfer the possibility of friction from one series of points to another on a higher plane and over a wider area. Remembrance of the war-time struggle between the naval and military air services, with its far-reaching ill effects, does not encourage a repetition of such hazards. More recently American experience—despite a simpler strategic problem—has provided a warning light of the discord that can arise where the two spheres of responsibility are interlocked. We have to deal with problems where defence of the land against air attack from the land or from the sea are intermingled with defence of the sea against air attack from the sea or from the land. The more the complexity of the problem becomes clear the more important is a hastening of the evolution of combined treatment. It would be a paradoxical result if one of the first concrete steps of the new efforts towards co-ordination were to be towards disconnection. Moreover, the re-opening of the whole question of the independence of the Fleet air arm is not likely to promote the growth of good relations on which effective co-ordination depends.

At the same time it is wise to recognise that such proposals arise partly from the growing realisation in the older services of the influence of air power. They feel their old powers declining, they see their customary instruments seriously affected. It is natural that they should seek fresh scope. Thus it is important to find an outlet for the human ability they contain and especially to provide the younger officers who would be the generals and admirals of the future with a horizon that holds out something more than a shrinking opportunity. It is possible that the treatment of the present stategic problem might be simplified by distributing operative responsibility on a larger geographical basis—one service supreme in each area. But this would leave the other difficulties still to be solved. To try for such a solution in a new separation would be a breach with the whole trend of modern conditions. A mere negative, however, will not suffice. The solution must be sought by constructive steps along the line of increasing co-ordination leading to ultimate combination. The Service motto, "Tria juncta in uno," must acquire a new sense and a new reality.

WALKER CUP GOLF MATCH

HONOUR FOR IRISH PLAYER

THE FOURTH TO BE SELECTED

C. J. EWING TO COMPETE AT PINE VALLEY

FOR the fourth year since its inception in 1922, Ireland will, in September, be represented in the British Walker Cup golf match against America, writes our Golf Correspondent.

During the recent Amateur Championship at St. Andrews, the Selection Committee published the names of six of the team to play in the ninth match of the series at Pine Valley, New Jersey, on September 2nd and 3rd. Yesterday the Committee announced the completed team, which includes Mr. Cecil J. Ewing, of the Co. Sligo (Rosses Point) and Portmarnock Clubs.

Next to winning the Amateur Championship, the greatest distinction in British amateur golf is to play for Britain in the Walker Cup, and the bestowal of the high honour on Mr. Ewing may be regarded, not only as a tribute to his prowess and skill as a golfer and a player, but as a compliment to Irish golf, which in recent years has played a conspicuous part in our happy relations with England, Scotland and Wales in the realms of sport.

A REAL GOLFER

That Mr. Ewing will, in the Walker Cup match, maintain the highest traditions of the Royal and Ancient game, and the no less exalted traditions of Irish sportsmanship, is a foregone conclusion. He is a real golfer in the strictest meaning of the word; for he plays the game as the old worthies of Royal Blackheath and St. Andrews played it. His achievement in the Amateur Championship on the classic green at St. Andrews last week left no doubt in the minds of those on the spot that his claims, so to speak, to inclusion in the team were well-nigh irresistible.

Now that he has been chosen we have no doubt that he will prove worthy of the confidence of the selectors, and add golfing strength to a British team that is a happy blend of ripe experience and youth.

THE FOURTH IRISHMAN

Mr. Ewing is the fourth Irishman to be thus honoured. Major Charles Hezlet, D.S.O., was in the team in 1924, 1926 and 1928. In 1928 Major G. N. C. Martin, D.S.O., also played in the singles at Chicago, and John Burke was included in 1934 at Brooklyn, Mass.

One of the longest players in the game with wood and iron, Mr. Ewing is a product of the links at Rosses Point. Coming to Dublin to enter the insurance profession, he became a member of the Castle club, where his prodigious length brought him into prominence. From the Castle he went to Portmarnock. There he quickly realised that it would be necessary to tighten up his game and to control his, up to then, too loose swing.

CECIL EWING.

West of Ireland champion in 1930 and 1932, he was beaten in the 1934 final, but last year he regained the title, beating J. Burke in the final by 3 and 1. He played in Ireland's three representative matches in 1934 and 1935. All the time he was concentrating on the improvement of his game. Perhaps, he sacrificed some of his length to greater accuracy, but it has paid him to do so, as he never played so convincingly as this year.

BEATEN BY CHAMPION

A remarkable circumstance connected with Mr. Ewing's appearance in the amateur championship came to light at the close of the meeting. For a fortnight he had been seriously ill with influenza, and it was to recuperate that on his doctor's orders he went to St. Andrews to "potter about and forget it." He entered for the championship; went from success to success, and it surely was no disgrace for a golfer wearing glasses in a rainstorm to be beaten in the semi-final by 4 and 2 by Hector Thomson, who was to become the new champion.

THE COMPLETED TEAM

The completed Walker Cup team is:—

Dr. William Tweddell (Stourbridge) (captain).
H. G. Bentley (Hesketh).
J. D. A. Langley (Northwood).
Percy B. Lucas (Sandy Lodge).
John McClean (Hayston).
Hector Thomson (Williamwood).
J. Morton Dykes (Western Galles).
G. B. Peters (Fereneze).
Cecil Ewing (County Sligo).
G. Alec. Hill (Sandy Lodge).

IRELAND'S LEAD IN DAVIS CUP TIE

Ireland won the Doubles match in the Davis Cup tie with Switzerland at Wilton place yesterday, and now lead by two matches to one, each side having won a Singles match on Thursday. G. L. Rogers and T. G. McVeagh defeated H. C. Fisher and W. Steiner 5-7, 6-4, 6-1, 6-4. The match will be concluded to-day, when the two remaining Singles matches will be played. Should Ireland win they will meet Germany at Berlin in the next round.

FIANNA FAIL CAMPAIGN

MINISTER ATTACKS LORD MAYOR

BOARD OF ASSISTANCE CONDEMNED

THE contention that national and political considerations should have no place in municipal affairs was ridiculous, declared Mr. Lemass, Minister for Industry and Commerce, at a meeting in the Red Bank Restaurant last night to open the campaign on behalf of the Fianna Fail candidates contesting the South City wards in the forthcoming municipal elections.

In the present circumstances of the country, which was involved in a political and economic dispute with a powerful neighbour who desired to father the growth of a public opinion amongst the people inimical to, or at least indifferent to, the national cause, continued Mr. Lemass. There should be no possibility of national opinion being misrepresented by a Lord Mayor or City Council whose attitude was not definitely that of the majority of the electors.

The citizens of Dublin had not been properly represented by the present Lord Mayor or City Council. They were elected on the restricted franchise which prevailed heretofore, but that fact was not always appreciated by those who had contact with them, particularly foreigners, who mistook them to be in their political opinion representative of the capital city of the Free State.

The danger of that situation rested in the creation of false hopes amongst those who believed that the Irish people could be forced to abandon their national aspirations by economic pressure.

"SCANDALOUS"

Having stated that the present election should be availed of to secure the return of candidates pledged to the national cause, Mr. Lemass went on to say that the Dublin Board of Assistance was not even representative of the City Council. The United Ireland party majority of the Dublin Corporation abused their powers by conferring membership of that Board to members of their own party caucus, and, having secured control, proceeded to direct its machinery in a scandalous manner. It had been evident that the members were less concerned with the performance of their statutory functions than with using their position for the benefit of their own party and with the obstruction of the Government.

It was the main duty of Fianna Fail to sweep out and keep out "Ward-heelers," said the Minister.

Continuing, he said: "Formerly Dublin was a byword among the cities of Europe because of its slums, and to-day while some progress has been made in improving the position there are still thousands of families living in dwellings unfit for human habitation. I have no desire to minimise the work done by the Corporation during the past three years, but the best they have been able to accomplish with very considerable State assistance is still far short of what is required if deplorable housing conditions are to be abolished with reasonable expedition."

HOUSING SCHEMES

Mr. Lemass dealt with the work in connection with the erection of houses in Dublin. He said that the preparation of schemes for the provision of 3,182 dwellings was being completed rapidly, while sites comprising an area of 646 acres had been selected provisionally. It would be the primary purpose of the Fianna Fail members of the new Council to concentrate all their energies and all the resources of the city upon the urgent task of securing still further expansion of housing activities. The Fianna Fail members of the Dail and City Council were the representatives of the working classes in Dublin, and it was with the working class that their primary duty lay. It was, therefore, to the workers they turned in that election.

It would be a very undesirable thing that there should be any doubt at the present time about the solidarity of the people who supported the policy of the Government. That policy had many aspects, but the most important aspects for the members of Fianna Fail were the national aspects.

INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS

"At the present time," said the Minister, "our industrial development is proceeding rapidly, and I feel certain that that rapid development is due to the widespread public conviction that the Government and the policy that made it possible are likely to continue for many years to come. If any action taken now should destroy that belief or shake that confidence it would have reactions upon the speed of our industrial development. I do not think that it could prevent it or reverse it, because the success of our industrial programme so far has been such that there is no longer any inferiority complex in relation to Irish industry, or any reluctance on the part of people in this country to engage in industrial enterprise." (Applause.)

Mr. Lemass went on to refer to the "wrecking tactics" of the Opposition. Fianna Fail had met the Opposition in each of their manifestations and had beaten them. To-day there were very few people who would not pay immediate tribute to the fact that economic conditions in the Free State were much better than they were when Fianna Fail came into office, and that the prospects of the future were much brighter than they have been for over a century.

Mr. G. Murphy, Fianna Fail director of elections in the South City, presided at the meeting.

CANDIDATE'S ADDRESS

At a meeting held in Seville place, Dublin, last night in support of the Fianna Fail candidates in the coming local elections, Mr. Oscar Traynor, newly-appointed Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for Defence, said that the Fianna Fail Party had nothing of political partisanship in its attitude on the Council. They stood 100 per cent. behind the Government, however, and on that principle they were contesting the elections.

They intended to see that housing schemes were put into operation. The Government's campaign for housing had not been worked to full capacity yet, but the Dublin Corporation was whole-heartedly endeavouring to supply the demand, and to this end every party had done its part. A Fianna Fail majority in the Council would be useful to complete the work.

He believed that Aldborough House, Dublin, for which the Corporation had been negotiating, would soon be handed over for the erection of flats which would be second to none in the city. He believed also that the Government would shortly reach the programme of 2,000 houses each year.

MARIAN ARTS GUILD FESTIVAL

SENIOR AND JUNIOR PLAYERS

Last night, the seventh of the Marian Arts Guild Festival, two plays were presented in the Senior and Junior Drama competitions by Miss Comerford's Players at the Father Mathew Hall, Dublin.

In the Senior competition Miss Winnie McCrystal took the part of Bernadette in the play, "The Shepherdess of Lourdes." The play is in five scenes and based on the story of the apparitions seen by St. Bernadette at Lourdes. A large cast interpreted the action of the play with dignity. Suitable music was provided by Mr. Patrick Delaney's orchestra.

As the Madonna, Miss May Costello acted with quiet reverence. The training given by the producer, Miss Lily Comerford, was evident in the beauty of movement and gesture which characterised the work of these young performers. Other prominent parts were taken by Miss Nancy Clince as the mother of Bernadette, Miss Eileen Magann as the Princess of Valencia, and Miss Marjorie Jones as Madame Massay.

The adjudicators were Mr. T. C. Murray and Mr. Peter Nolan.

In the Junior section, "The Spell," by Bernard Duffy, was presented. Master Sean Power showed a true appreciation of his rôle as the umbrella-mender. Also good were Miss Marjorie Jones as the umbrella-mender's wife, and Miss Winnie McCrystal as the Bean Sidhe. The music was specially written for the play by Dr. Larchet.

LABOUR POLICY DEFINED

MR. NORTON ON CITY MANAGEMENT

MUNICIPAL HOUSING CLAIMS DENIED

NOTHING could be done by the representatives of the people in the Dublin Corporation while the City Management Act was in force and the City Manager held office. The Labour Party would get rid of the City Management Act and the City Manager in the interests of the working-class citizens. Neither the Fianna Fail nor Fine Gael parties had that in their programmes, said Mr. William Norton, T.D., leader of the Labour Party in the Dail, in the course of his speech at a public meeting last night at Stafford street, Dublin. He was speaking on behalf of the five No. 3 Area Labour candidates in the municipal elections—Messrs. F. Foley, Irish Municipal Employés' Trade Union; Seamus McGowan, North-West Branch, Labour Party; John Murray, N.U.R.; D. O'Hanlon, Irish Transport and General Workers' Union, and Martin O'Sullivan, T.C., Railway Clerks' Association.

Mr. Michael Price, who presided at the meeting, said that the object of the Labour Party was to break the connection with imperialist Britain and to break the connection with capitalism and establish the Irish Workers' Republic. The Labour Party rejected the blasphemy that bad housing and unemployment were the inevitable lot of one class of people. They declared that such degradation as the people at present suffered was inevitable until such time as the basis of production was altered. It had been made apparent that the overwhelming importance of the contribution of the Labour Party to the ending of partition could not be ignored.

WHY THE ACT SHOULD GO

Mr. William Norton, T.D., said that the Fine Gael Party had passed the City Management Act and put in a City Manager who was a sort of Napoleon to the Dublin Corporation, and nobody could do anything in the Corporation unless the City Manager allowed them to do it. The City Manager decided everything. The Fianna Fail Party had opposed the Act, but recently in the Dail Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly announced that it was not proposed to amend the City Management Act, and that the City Manager was to be allowed to carry on. Neither of these parties could have any policy in regard to the Corporation so long as they left the City Manager in control. It was the intention of the Labour Party to amend the City Management Act, and to put the City Manager in the position of being the servant of the people's representatives, and not their boss, as he was to-day. It was because they had their eyes wide open, and saw that nothing could be done on a large scale in the Corporation, that they declared—as no other party in Dublin had done—that the Labour Party stood to repeal the Act, to remove the City Manager, and give back to the representatives of the people their rights.

The Lord Mayor had stated that the Corporation had built a thousand houses a year. He himself, however, had obtained statistics from the Minister for Local Government of the total number of houses built by the Dublin Corporation in the city, including Pembroke and Rathmines, during the last six years. The number of houses built by the Corporation in 1930 was 717, in 1931 223, in 1932 850, in 1933 251, in 1934 910, and in 1935 1,085—so that the Corporation in these six years had built 4,036 new houses, or an average of 672 per year, to house the working-classes of Dublin.

He assured them that, unless the Labour candidates were returned at these elections, the record would be even worse during the next three years. A thousand houses a year would never solve the city slum problem.

The working classes, he said, were being transferred to the outskirts of the city, and yet they had the most inefficient transport service in this island. Compared with other cities, it was the dearest transport service in England, Scotland or Wales. There was no reason why the workingman should not be able to travel from Glasnevin to Terenure for twopence. The people were being taxed in order that exorbitant rents might be secured by ground landlords. They wanted the Dublin Corporation to be enabled to tax ground rents where they built houses, roads, sewers, and lighted places with the citizens' money.

The candidates also addressed the meeting.

DUBLIN LABOUR TROUBLES

STRIKES THREATENED

Over 2,300 Dublin workers are involved in disputes which may lead to strikes. If these workers decide to stop work almost as many more will be affected indirectly.

The workers directly concerned include 1,700 in the bakery trade, 500 in the Electricity Supply Board, 150 in the woollen trade. In addition, minor disputes are threatened in the soap manufacturing trade, and in a Dublin waterproof factory.

Last night the members of the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union employed in the Lucan Woollen Mills took a ballot in regard to strike action. The result will be communicated to the executive officers of the union to-day.

The news that the Electricity Supply Board's proposals for a settlement with its employés in Dublin Nos. 1 and 2 Operation Areas, in the Central Stores, and in the clerical departments have been rejected, has been communicated to the Department of Industry and Commerce by the union. It is expected that a further effort will be made to secure a settlement before the postponed strike notices are put into operation.

THE BAKERS

To-morrow's meeting of bakers and bread-van drivers, in the Rotunda Picture House, will decide regarding action in support of the demand for the restoration of all wage "cuts" made since the peak period. Reports on the negotiations between the Dublin Master Bakers' Association, the Irish Bakers', Confectioners' and Allied Trades' Amalgamated Union, and the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union will be submitted by the Joint Negotiating Committee.

The last-named body met on Thursday, but had no new proposals for further negotiations before it, nor had it received any correspondence from the employers since the rejection of the men's demands. It decided that there was nothing to be gained by any further delay in putting the position before the rank and file of the workers.

The workers employed by the Automac Company, Waterproof and Rainproof Manufacturers, Shamrock place, Dublin, will come to a decision in support of their demand for holiday payments to-day. The question of non-Union labour in a Dublin soap factory will be reviewed during the week-end.

In all these cases, except the last, in which a notice has already been served, the notices for usual periods for the respective trades will be given before any stoppage of work takes place.

ANGLO-EGYPTIAN TALKS

MINISTER NOT GOING TO LONDON

From Reuter's Correspondent.
CAIRO, Friday.

It is understood now that the Egyptian Minister of Foreign Affairs, Wassef Pasha Ghali, is not proceeding to London after all in connection with the Anglo-Egyptian negotiations.

The Minister is spending a holiday in Paris, and it was stated recently that he would go to London in order to collaborate with Sir Miles Lampson, the British High Commissioner, who has returned to report to the British Government on the progress of the negotiations.

"QUEEN MARY'S" HOMECOMING

THOUSANDS SEE HER OFF

GLIDES FROM DOCK WITHOUT A HITCH

GREAT SHIP AGAIN TAKES LONGER TRACK

Press Association Foreign Special.
NEW YORK, Friday.

THE Queen Mary left here at 3.55 p.m. B.S.T. (10.36 a.m. New York daylight-saving time) to-day on the return trip of her maiden voyage, after being here just under four days. Pushed by two tiny tugs, the great ship slipped out of dock like a greyhound. It took only two minutes to the second until the whole of her tremendous length had cleared the dock. She sailed under her own power for a moment, and then, when she neared the Jersey shore, four others tugs which were waiting for her joined in and turned her bows down stream.

Although the Cunard-White Star Company had limited the number of friends the passengers could bring on board to two each, thousands of people lined the pier waving Union Jacks and pelting the ship and her passengers with confetti and streamers as they walked up the gangway. Thousands more thronged the streets near the harbour, cheerfully obeying the instructions of the police, and equally cheerfully waving at nothing when asked to do so by the cameramen.

DEAFENING FAREWELL

Three deafening blasts from the Queen Mary's syren finally told them that the liner was off, and every craft in the harbour took up the farewell and answered with their syrens, whistles or hooters. It was an ear-splitting cacophony. A stiff north-west breeze was blowing, but it did not appear to trouble the ship in the slightest. Every manœuvre was carried out without a hitch and with a rapidity which left the thousands of spectators gasping with admiration.

The passengers and their friends were ordered to be aboard not later than 8.30 this morning (1.30 B.S.T.), and from an early hour the approaches to the pier were jammed with taxis and cars, while the early arrivals stood around the gangway watching the people file on board. A cheer went up as Sir Percy Bates, the Cunard's Chairman, was recognised. Another cheer welcomed Lord Essendon, one of the Cunard's directors. Screen fans shouted their excitement as Joan Bennett, who had tried vainly to disguise herself with a pair of dark glasses, walked on board, followed by a considerable retinue. Next came Carl Brisson.

ALL ASHORE

At 10 o'clock (3 p.m. B.S.T.) all visitors were ordered ashore. They flocked to a number of vantage points to watch the mighty liner manœuvre into the river. Under a cloudless sky aeroplanes circled and dipped in salute over the Queen Mary, and passing craft hooted cheerfully their "God speed." Tugs fussed and puffed around her, conscious of the importance of their rôle. Then at 10.47 (3.47 p.m. B.S.T.) the hawsers were slipped, and five tugs took up their positions astern of the Queen Mary, but their services were not needed. Two midget tugs pressing tightly on the knife-like bow of the Queen Mary were all that was needed.

Once away from the dock the great ship began to go astern under her own power. It looked for a moment as if the tugs would be capsized, but there was no incident. Four other tugs slowly turned the giant bows down stream towards the sea and shepherded her into deep water. Then, with a deep-throated farewell on her sirens, the Queen Mary bade her farewell, cast off the tugs, and sped off down the river towards the sea, conscious of her strength, as it seemed, and, if unofficial reports are true, certain of making a new eastward record.

THE BLUE RIBAND

It is almost exactly a year ago since the Normandie gained the Blue Riband for the homeward trip of her maiden voyage by covering the distance between the Ambrose Lightship and Bishop's Rock, Scilly Islands, in 4 days, 3 hours and 28 minutes. This was just 14 minutes longer than she took on her record outward voyage. Her average speed for the return trip was 30.31 knots. Her average for the outward voyage was 29.94 knots.

The Queen Mary made her outward voyage in 2 hours 32 minutes longer than the Normandie's outward record of 4 days, 3 hours, 14 minutes.

Among those on board the Queen Mary on this trip, in addition to Sir Percy Bates, Lord Essendon, Miss Joan Bennett and Mr. Carl Brisson, are Lord Inverclyde, Lord Wolmer, M.P.; Lady Chilton, Sir Alfred Booth, Director and late Chairman of the Cunard; Sir Thomas Brocklebank, Sir Ian Fraser, M.P.; Sir Keith Fraser, Professor Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, and Mr. Jack Buchanan.

The Queen Mary is following Track B, the southern or longer track, which she followed on her outward voyage.

OUT TO THE OPEN SEA

From A. F. Tinsley, Correspondent on Board the Queen Mary.
Friday.

As the Queen Mary came abreast the Ambrose Lightship this afternoon she started to speed up, beginning a run which may culminate in a record homeward run. She has carefully crept through the narrows, and now is heading for the open sea.

The Queen Mary, with her 1,850 passengers, majestically steamed down the river under a hot sun and an azure sky, leaving behind her the salutations of every type of river craft, which kept her syren busy for some time. Several crowded liners passed her, including the Carinthia and the Oriente, inward bound, with passengers jamming the ship's rails, whistling and waving.

AMALGAMATING COMPANIES

STATE'S INSURANCE PLANS

FURTHER CRITICISM IN THE DAIL

IN the Dail yesterday morning, the House approved, on the motion of Mr. LEMASS, of the draft convention concerning the employment of women on underground work in mines of all kinds, adopted by the International Labour Conference at its nineteenth session, and recommended the Executive Council to take the necessary steps for its ratification.

The Telephone Capital Bill, 1936, passed its final stage without discussion.

The House resumed the discussion of the Insurance Bill in the re-committal stage.

Mr. LEMASS, Minister for Industry and Commerce, said that he had been considering the points raised by Deputy Dockrell on the previous night, and was prepared to insert an amendment by which the rights conferred by Section 22 would be confined to policyholders.

A number of amendments by Mr. SEUMAS BOURKE (U.I.P., Tipperary), with the object of securing that the losses of all part-time or whole-time officers and employés, directors, auditors, etc., whose positions were worsened as a result of the operations of the Act, should be made good by the amalgamated company or companies, were ruled out of order.

Mr. LEMASS said that any amalgamation scheme would be prepared by the companies, and they could provide for people under their scheme. He did not think that they should place upon them a statutory obligation to do so.

"THE HEALTHIER LEG"

Mr. LYNCH (U.I.P., Kerry), for Mr. Dillon (U.I.P., Donegal), moved an amendment for the purpose of enabling companies to shed either their life business or their fire and general business. There was no reason why the composite company should be compelled to shed their general business; it should be left optional, and surely the company should be left to itself to decide which was the healthier leg on which to stand.

Mr. LEMASS said that the reason it was not possible to accept the deputy's amendment was because it was by no means certain that companies would be sufficiently strong to carry on fire and general business. The purpose of the bill was to secure that all classes of business would be carried on by companies with sufficient resources. He was prepared to consider what steps could be taken to facilitate them in that respect, provided that whatever plan was evolved was of such a nature as to secure that the companies would be sufficiently strong to justify their continued existence. He thought it was a matter that could be left over to the next stage.

Mr. DOCKRELL (U.I.P., Dublin Co.) said that surely the companies would be under proper supervision with their licences to enable the Minister to decide whether the transaction was one which he would sanction or not. The Minister could go a little further and see whether some facilities could not be given, such as were envisaged in the amendment.

"A SERIOUS MATTER"

Mr. COSGRAVE (U.I.P., Cork Borough) said that it was rather a matter for cooperation between the Minister and the companies rather than that the Minister should set down a headline. The companies had this to their advantage, that they had years of experience, and if by reason of the work they had done the companies that were now practically solvent were in any way endangered by the Minister's proposals, it was a serious matter for consideration.

Mr. DILLON said that under this bill the reward for insolvency seemed to be Government maintenance for evermore, while the reward for solvency was to expose solvent companies to the four winds of competition. The whole purpose of this legislation was to protect policy-holders. What was to be done about insolvent companies in which people were induced to take policies for patriotic reasons? If they wanted to maintain insurance independent of the State they should get the insolvent companies taken over by solvent companies. The Minister's proposal would give the insolvent companies Government assistance and leave the solvent companies to face British and foreign competition.

Mr. DOCKRELL contended that the amalgamation of solvent with insolvent companies would not make the latter solvent. It would bring in directors who would be totally opposed to each other in outlook. From a business point of view he protested against the Government putting money into a company such as this in order to keep it going. It was altogether different from promoting a new industry in order to give it a chance.

NOT A SOLUTION

They were now going to have an amalgamation of insolvent companies, plus Government capital, which would enable the new company to offer certain conditions, but it would not be a solution of the problem. The company would be increasing its liability, for he could not imagine the Government letting the company have the money as a gift. It would only increase the amount in the cash box. It would not increase the company's earning capacity. What such a company wanted was a loan with no obligation to pay interest on it. It was not fair to the business community for the Government to put money into a concern to which the ordinary investing public would not subscribe.

He suggested to the Minister that, if he had made up his mind, certain companies should be reconstructed, with some sort of a grant fund, so as to be on a better financial basis.

Mr. COSTELLO (U.I.P., Dublin County) said that the amalgamation proposals, before they became law, were stillborn. Why should solvent companies, desiring to amalgamate voluntarily, be subject to Government interference?

Mr. LEMASS said that he thought it would be practical to devise a scheme enabling all the Saorstat companies to come together welded into one unit, and in a strong enough position to command business.

INSOLVENT COMPANIES

Mr. DILLON said that if the Minister had any scheme in mind it should be communicated to the House. It was the desire of the companies to co-operate with the Department in reason, and they should know what the Minister's design was. The proper place to arrive at that knowledge was the Dail. If insolvent companies were to be wound up, the Exchequer would have to pay a sufficient sum to pay back the policyholders. The proposals of the Minister were going to make the carrying on of business impossible, and it was a grossly unfair situation that by the help of the Government insolvent companies should become solvent and independent, while solvent companies would in time become insolvent.

Mr. DOCKRELL asked the Minister was his idea the amalgamation of the five Irish companies.

Mr. LEMASS—All companies operating here.

Mr. DOCKRELL invited the Minister to pass from the consideration of industrial insurance to other forms of insurance, and tell the House what he considered would be an ideal solution.

In replay to Mr. Costello, Mr. LEMASS said that he would look into the application of the section to solvent companies which had amalgamated and had got no financial assistance from the Government.

The amendment was defeated without a division.

Mr. DILLON, in moving an amendment to Section 25 of the bill, said that the section invested the Minister with power to reject any amalgamation scheme submitted to him, and with power to amend such scheme in any specified manner or particular. The object of the amendment was to place on the Minister the obligation of being reasonable and of giving the aggrieved party the right to go to the Courts.

Mr. LEMASS said that he could not accept the amendment. He would be reasonable in all cases where an amalgamation scheme was submitted. The attitude of the Opposition appeared to be that the insurance laws of the State should be written by the companies.

The amendment was negatived.

Progress was reported and the Dail adjourned until 3 p.m. on Tuesday next.

THE SCHOOL AND THE FARM

CAREERS FOR SURPLUS BOYS

FACTORY TRAINING FOR YOUTHS

From Our Reporter.
DROGHEDA, Friday.

A SUGGESTION that the Vocational Education Committees should institute classes for the training of employers was made when the concluding session of the thirty-second Annual Congress of the Irish Technical Education Association was held here to-day.

The proposal arose out of a discussion on a paper, "Apprenticeship: Apprenticeship Committees and Education," read by Mr. Eamon Lynch, Barrister-at-Law, Secretary of the Trade Union Congress, who suggested that there was a need for amending legislation to make the attendance of young people at technical schools compulsory during the working day, and increase the efficiency of the Technical Instruction Department.

Mr. Lynch traced the history of the system of apprenticeship from its early guild form in the middle ages down to the present time, when the apprentice usually finds himself as an operative with the craftsman. Thus the evolution brought the custody and control of the apprentice largely within the care of the trade union. It might be said that the union, as such, should have no interest in the training of the apprentice in his craft, but the craft unions expressed an intense desire that their apprentices should be adequately instructed; for there was nothing they detested more than uninstructed, incompetent and slovenly craftsmen. A recent development in the activity of certain craft unions was their advent into the realm of production for exhibition purposes, in which they were repeating their early existence when they were part of a guild. The main rule adopted in the struggle of union and the employer had been the fixing of a ratio of the apprentices to the journeymen.

Despite the extraordinary simplification of processes in industry, there still remained the demand for the competent workman. That competence was not now imparted in the workshop to the extent formerly, and hence the unions welcomed the system of technical instruction or vocational training of their apprentices as a supplementary education.

TRAINING

Mr. Lynch referred to the indifference of the employer to the proper training of his apprentices, and said the employer should be made to shoulder his responsibility; for, when incompetence was general, the cost would have to be borne by the community of customers.

"If the employers will not take sufficient interest in their apprentices in the workshop and devote sufficient time and training to them, and if the State or the community has to step in and, by way of technical instruction, to make good the absence of training—all of which secures greater efficiency and, hence, profits for the employers—then the employers must be made realise the heavy subsidisation of their industry and help in the general improvement which the trade unions desire and which the community is paying for by the maintenance of a splendidly equipped department of technical instruction.

"The way, therefore, the trade unions suggest this may best be done, alike in the interest of the student and the instructor, is to abolish evening instruction, which can be much better imparted during the day.

"Under the Conditions of Employment Act, enacted on Friday, 29th May, this year, young persons, i.e., those under eighteen years of age are forbidden to work more than forty hours per week. This precedent can well be followed up, and young persons can be obliged at the expense of the employer to attend at a technical school for a minimum of ten hours per week during the working period of the workshop. This is the least sacrifice which the employer should be obliged to make, and it is due to the community that it should not be asked to tolerate semi-trained workmen when it is so heavily subsidising industry as when it pays to maintain a huge department like the Department of Technical Instruction without getting an adequate return for the money so spent.

CHILD LABOUR

"There can be no adequate return while the present system of night training is maintained. The employer takes during the day the bulk of the energies of the apprentices or young persons. The youth is then turned over to the technical instructor when his energies are flagging, and the instructor is then expected to impart in such a state of exhaustion the necessary knowledge and the youth expected to imbibe it. This is a waste of the energies of the instructor and unfair to the adolescent.

"Sufficient public opinion could not be concentrated on this aspect of our otherwise splendid system of technical instruction."

Mr. Lynch alluded to the conditions governing the apprentices in the printing trade in Dublin, who were bound to attend a special course of technical instruction, and said that legislation promoting similar conditions for all trades was most desirable.

Dealing with the Apprenticeship Act, 1931, which, he said, made an effort to improve the status of apprentices, Mr. Lynch suggested that this legislation would be more welcome among trade unionists when the penal clause, prohibiting the unions from interfering with their apprentices under penalty, where an Apprenticeship Committee had been set up, would be removed. The unions were not willing to give over to any extern body, the control they exercised over apprentices.

Concluding, Mr. Lynch paid a tribute to the education and instruction given in the technical schools.

Mr. J. P. Hackett, B.E., Senior Inspector of the Department of Education, who proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Lynch, said that the mass production system had its good points, but every time he went to a large factory the way in which the human units had to work inspired in him a feeling of repugnance. It was wrong, however, to suggest that there were two inherently antagonistic classes in industry, and that the employer was the villain of the piece. They could not really classify the employers; they were different one from the other; they were persons just as much as the worker. His general feeling was that immediately he began to speak to an employer about the training of apprentices they got a "far-away look in their eyes." "If I could tell them some way in which they can save half a million in a particular process they would waken up immediately. The employer, however, should not be blamed for that. I do not think that the employers is less hard driven than the employé."

SLIDING RULES

Mr. Hackett said that it was not possible to make rules for all workers in all industries; there must be specific conditions for specific people. It was impossible to dictate to the workers if the workers were unwilling to accept.

Mr. E. Joynt, Bolton Street Technical Institute, Dublin, seconding, said that there was not a single employé in the sheet metal industry in Dublin who had not gone through the technical school.

Many of them had risen to prominence in the craft in other countries. The particular union dealing with the trade insisted that every apprentice should receive instruction at the technical schools. Craftsmanship was as important to-day as it ever was. A great many employers of a certain type took from the roadside boys who had reached the fourth standard to work in their factories. He looked upon that in these days, when every place of importance throughout the country had a technical school, as a crime against industry. It should be made a rule that the employers should apply first to the technical schools.

Mr. Robert Morrow, Irish Trade Union Congress, said that the workers wanted more technical training for apprentices; they could not get enough of it.

Mr. W. Woods Hill, Dublin Chamber of Commerce, said that the members of the chamber had more than an abstract interest in technical education. They recognised its importance in connection with the trade revival. He suggested that the whole Apprenticeship Act should be reconstructed in view of the industrial revival.

The industrial revival in this country had shown in a serious shortage of skilled craftsmen, and he thought that the unions would have to agree to a relaxation of the rigid rules regulating the number of apprentices in order to meet the demand for skilled labour which had arisen in consequence of it. There was a great difference of opinion, first, as regards the age at which young people were most easily trained, and, secondly, with regard to the relative value of training in the workshop and education in the technical school.

APPRENTICES

He was of opinion that employers would have to pay very much more attention to the questions of the vocational training and technical instruction of apprentices than they had done in the past. In this country, to a certain extent, they were new to modern industrial conditions, and it was possible that they might have to institute classes for future employers.

Mr. W. Davidson, Principal, Building Section, Bolton street Technical Schools, Dublin, said that many industries collapsed because of the lack of education of employés, who knew nothing about the work that was required in their industry. Those were the people who wanted the training.

Alderman J. Dowd addressed the delegates on behalf of the Executive Committee of the National Athletic and Cycling Association of Ireland. He appealed to them to throw in their weight in the big effort which was being made for the development of athletics in the country. The development of a healthy mind in a healthy body was an ideal which should be the foundation of the educational system. Other countries had recognised the necessity to a greater extent than this country, and several progressive Governments had made physical training an essential part of educational programmes. They did not need any compulsion towards that end in this country. The aim of the Association was to make Ireland an A1 nation, not only in the domain of mental culture, but in the physical sense also, and the delegates could help in that effort.

Mr. G. J. T. Clampett, barrister-at-law, Principal of Rathmines Technical School, said that the Standing Council would give Alderman Dowd's appeal their earnest consideration, and he could count on their support for the movement.

Mr. P. J. O'Reilly, Chief Executive Officer of the Tipperary (S.R.) Vocational Education Committee, then read the second part of his paper, dealing with the finance of county schemes of vocational education. In the course of it he mentioned that in order to assist the new factories special training classes had had to be organised in a number of counties. The manager of the factory often was employed. He usually was a highly qualified expert, and was not always willing to devote his energies to such work unless paid at a special high rate, compared with the rate applicable to the ordinary part-time teachers. The necessity for providing reasonable clerical assistance though clear was not always appreciated, particularly by the central authority. The links in the chain of organisation continually were in need of attention and repair, and, overwhelmed with routine duties, the Chief Executive Officer had not always the time, even if he had the energy, to keep in close touch with the details of the organisation and the teaching staff.

Mr. O'Reilly proposed the following resolution, which was adopted:—"That, having regard to the increased rates of salaries payable to teaching staffs under the conditions prescribed in the Department's memorandum to the fluctuations in the cost of living bonus, and to the heavy expenditure incurred by committees in connection with special classes organised in connection with new factories, and to the fact that nearly all county schemes include provision for urban districts, we consider that the ratio between the Department grant and the local contribution was such as to make it practically impossible for committees to cater adequately for the areas under their administrative control."

A resolution requesting the Ministers of Education and Finance to make a fifty per cent. increase in the present contributions from Government grants for the development of vocational schemes in rural areas was referred to the Standing Council by agreement.

The Congress conveyed thanks to Alderman Walsh, Mayor of Drogheda, and his colleagues; the Right Rev. Mons. Lyons, P.P., V.G., and the members of the local Vocational Committee; Mr. E. Daly and his staff of the Technical School; the Chairman and Committee, and Mr. Rice, Co.C., of County Louth, and to Alderman Corish, T.D., "whose tact and personality," stated a resolution, "made our meetings both pleasant and business-like."

The Congress concluded.

TOWN TENANTS TRIBUNAL

HIGH PROFITS FOR BUILDERS

FIXITY OF TENURE DESIRED

A TENANT who said that he and his family had occupied a house for 65 years, and felt that he was not secure, was one of the witnesses who were examined at a sitting of the Town Tenants Tribunal, at which Mr. William Black, K.C., Chairman, presided, in the Circuit Court, Dublin, yesterday.

He was Mr. A. J. Hansen, Castlerea. He stated that the rent was £15 and the rates amounted to £5. During all those years they, as tenants, did all the repairs to the premises, which consisted of a shop and five rooms. As regards rent, he had no grievance, but he believed that he was not secure: the house might be sold over his head at any time. The house had been built for £150, and, although they had paid so much in respect of rent and renovations, they did not own a stone of the place. He was anxious to see some State scheme introduced to provide for house purchase

Unduly high profits were, said Mr. Hansen, made by speculative builders in Castlerea. For a £400 house, for which they got a £70 subsidy, they charged £1 a week rent, and were able to recoup themselves in eight years.

When asked by the Tribunal why some of the people of Castlerea did not come together with the object of securing the profits for themselves, Mr. Hansen said that people in rural areas who had had money some years ago now found it difficult to make ends meet. Shopkeepers could neither get nor give credit and banks would advance money only on the security of people who had deposits with them.

Mr. Hansen said that he knew of business people who, although they had had business with banks for thirty years and always had acted honourably, could not get £1 overdraft.

The witness represented the National Town Tenants' League, and was called by Mr. J. B. Lavelle, solicitor, Ballaghadereen, who appeared for that body and also for the United Town Tenants' Organisation.

DAMAGE BY TENANTS

Timothy O'Leary, Cadogan road, Fairview, Dublin, gave evidence to the effect that there was growing imposition on small property owners, and spoke of damage that, he said, was done to property by some tenants, such as the smashing of lavatory basins, the wrenching of doors from their hinges, and window frames from windows, and the choking of drains.

There was also, he asserted, abuse of the Public Health Act, as the result of which abuse an innocent tenant could be brought before the Courts and be fined for a nuisance caused by other tenants, or by evilly disposed persons, with or without collusion with the tenants. He suggested that all freedom of contract between landlord and tenant should be restored.

Mr. J. Baker (instructed by Mr. Herman Good), who appeared for the Irish Tenants' Protection Society, addressed the Tribunal at considerable length, and stated in the course of his remarks that on the general question of control the attitude of the Society was that, far from discontinuing control, it was necessary to make control of rents more effective than it had been hitherto. Generally speaking, it was the opinion of the Society that the rent restriction code had worked fairly and squarely, but it was beginning to age, and they would like to see its efficiency maintained. If a policy of laisser faire were adopted there was no saying to what extent rents would be increased.

The Tribunal adjourned until 10.30 a.m. to-day.

EMBOROUGH'S CUP

Fine Finish of Flying Scotsman Gains Produce Stakes

FROM OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.

MANCHESTER, Friday Night.

If this afternoon's race for the Manchester Cup was not one of the best that we have seen for the event, and there was no Isonomy or Bachelor's Button in the field, there were many bright features; for the crowd was the biggest for many years.

There is no doubt about it that racing is beginning to boom again in England. Attendances are splendid everywhere, even in the areas that prosperity has not yet come to, like this part of Lancashire. The cold wind had gone, and the weather was delightfully warm.

The Cup was won by Lord Glanely with Emborough, a four-year-old, by Gainsborough out of Embarras de Richesse, bred at the National Stud, and sold as a yearling for 1,500 guineas. Lord Glanely deserved a turn of luck; for fate has dogged him all the season, and he was delighted when the luck changed in such an important event as this is.

Open Betting Race

It was a remarkably open betting race, with nine of the eleven runners quoted at from six to one to ten to one, the other pair—John James and the French newcomer, Crisa—being at twenty to one and fifty to one, respectively.

The first to leave the gate were Carr's pair, Pegomas and Merely a Minor. His Reverence did not jump into his stride, as he usually does, and was one of the last four away; but Tommy Burns had rattled him up into third place before they had gone half a mile.

Astyanax, who was joint favourite with His Reverence, was slowly away, along with Fineweed and John James, but the French horse never improved much and could only finish seventh. Mr. Lambton was, naturally, very disappointed with his running.

Struck a Post

Pegomas continued to lead, with Merely a Minor going a little the better of the pair, but coming into the straight he struck a post with his knee and nearly came down. Then Merely a Minor was left in the lead, followed by His Reverence and Emborough. His Reverence went into the lead inside the next furlong, but dropped back as quickly as he had come, and was so well beaten that Burns ceased riding him some distance out. He finished last of all, except for the injured Pegomas. For some reason or other, top weights do not win the Manchester Cup.

Emborough then went on clear and won decisively by two lengths and a head from Chrysler II. and Moneybox, who lacked speed when he came to challenge. I can only account for the failure of His Reverence by suggesting that he did not stay the extra quarter of a mile.

Richards Begins Well

Gordon Richards began the afternoon by riding the first two winners—Bonc in a seller (Cowie's stable), and Anna Maria for Mr. Sofer Whitburn, in the Cotton Stakes. The latter, a filly by Torlonia, was an easy winner by two lengths from the favourite, the Helvetic filly.

Frank Hartigan then won the Friday Selling Plate with Old Times, a filly by Prince Meteor, who, in spite of being one of the worst drawn, beat Lover's Walk by half a length. The three-year-old was bought in for the small price of 75 guineas. Bonc had cost 260 guineas to retain.

Then Major McCalmont changed the luck for Lambton's stable when his Herod Phillip gelding, Vallip, strongly ridden by Carslake, was an easy winner by two lengths of the Brackley Welter Handicap. Dangan dropped out after looking like being placed.

Welcome Change of Luck

Another stable that had a welcome change of luck was that of Jack Jarvis, when Flying Scotsman, a colt by Flamingo, won the Stud Produce Stakes, after a great race with Catnip and Royal Romance, whom he beat by a head and a neck. E. Smith excelled himself on the winner in a very fine finish, forcing Flying Scotsman up in the last few strides.

Many people were under the impression that Catnip had won outright if he had not dead-heated. The winner cost Sir Laurence Philips 1,700 guineas as a yearling out of Sir Richard Brooke's stud.

Selections

One of the best meetings that I can remember at Castle Irwell in every respect except the weather ends to-morrow, when the Salford Borough Handicap will attract its usual good field of sprinters, headed by Greenore, who was beaten by Auld Reekie in this event twelve months ago. Lady Ludlow's gelding may not be at his best yet, but he meets Auld Reekie on 4lb. better terms than last year. I believe that Peacock's horse is greatly fancied to win the race a second time. Consequential should beat Greenore on the York running, but others may beat him. One hard to make out is Apollo, who has undeniable speed, but erratic manners. He is one that I think may be left out. The Dentist has a 10lb. penalty for his hollow win at Epsom, and I think that he will confirm the placings with Jovial Lad.

Gay Venture is one with a chance, but not, I think, so good as that of the bottom weight, Kinderscout. As Kinderscout was smart last year and has run well twice this season I choose KINDERSCOUT, The Dentist and Auld Reekie, and suggest that they may finish in this order.

If the Irish colt Manifold were to run for the Red Rose Stakes he would seem to have a chance, as it will not be a strong field to oppose him. Mrs. Arthur James's Citadel was an easy winner last time out from Allensford and Malplaquet, and this represents fair form.

Then there is the Yorkshire colt, Obliterated, who has only run one moderate race this season, at Chester, where the course did not suit him. He began by winning the Batthyany at Lincoln, and on his last outing ran Joshua to a length over a mile at York. Joshua subsequently won a good race at Epsom. I think OBLITERATED is best at six furlongs, and he may be the winner, though Citadel constitutes a great danger.

The Wolverton Maiden Plate should be won by AMAZON'S MODEL.

There is also good racing at Windsor. The Round Tower Handicap I put between Kyles of Minard, Parole and CARLINO, and the last named may be the best.

The Speedy Plate may go to ARABIAN MYTH or Bagpipes; and EARLY CLOSING may repeat last year's success in the High-weight Handicap.

GALTEE MORE.

GAY VENTURE BEST

Citadel Likely to Win Red Rose Stakes at Manchester

Auld Reekie and Greenore, first and second, respectively, in the Salford Borough Handicap last year, clash again in this £1,000 event at Manchester to-day. I prefer Auld Reekie of the pair, because he has to allow Greenore only 4lb. for a two lengths' beating, and being the younger horse he should have made the greater amount of progress during the past twelve months. Middleham advices indicate that Auld Reekie has done well since his race at Thirsk over a month ago, when he was unplaced to Ken Hill, who received 26lb. Earlier in the season he finished third to Windolite and Touchez Pas over this distance at Liverpool. He has an advantage of 2lb with Touchez Pas for half a length.

The Dentist may not be stopped by a 10lb. penalty, for he won in brilliant style at Epsom, and had he been ridden right out I do not doubt that he could have beaten Jovial Lad by more than five lengths. Thus the 12lb. allowance the latter gets may not be sufficient. Gay Venture never runs a bad race. He has a great chance on his latest form, as he was giving Hans Sachs 13lb. and Oo-er 10lb. when fourth to them at Newmarket. These two are recent winners.

Kinderscout was a winner over the course twelve months ago, but his form this year is not very encouraging. I give a fairly confident vote to

GAY VENTURE.

Mrs. Arthur James may win the valuable Red Rose Stakes with the speedy

CITADEL.

This colt gave weight and a sound beating to Allensford at Newmarket and has reached the peak of his form. Kong failed by only half a length to give Herodote Bachelor 24lb. at Chepstow, and she will be a big danger if reproducing that running.

BABS GELDING,

a convincing winner from such useful juveniles as Lonely Lady, Red Rule filly and Solidago at Alexandra Park recently, should notch another bracket in the Lytham Plate. Scotch Trout's victory on Wednesday is a pointer to for the Prestbury Handicap.

There were eighty-one runners for the one-day fixture at Windsor last year, and this total may be surpassed to-day.

CARLINO

has been waiting for softer galloping conditions. He was twice second in the early part of the season, and may win the Round Tower Handicap. The draw will probably influence the market on the Speedy Plate, which is usually won by the favourite. My choice is who has not met with defeat in three races.

Newbrook Races

8th June, 1936

The Recent rain has made the going excellent for Newbrook Races on MONDAY NEXT. The Tote will be in operation for the first time in the People's enclosure which has been considerably enlarged and an additional Stand made available.

NEWMARKET HINTS FOR TO-DAY

We have half-a-dozen runners for the Lytham Plate at Manchester, and the best of them is

BABS GELDING.

For the Distance Selling Handicap I advise the support, each way, of who has done well since joining Digby's team.

Each of our candidates for the Salford Borough Handicap is thought to hold a reasonable chance. Apollo can meet Gay Venture and Touchez Pas on better terms than when he finished behind them in the Crawfurd Plate here, and, although he finished last in a recent trial, I expect him to run better than is generally expected. By his easy success at Epsom The Dentist showed that he has returned to his best form, and I consider him to be very dangerous to my selection, who should be supported each way.

KINDERSCOUT (next best),

The chance of

CITADEL

is preferred to that of Silver Wings and Aldine for the Red Rose Stakes.

THE RUFF

may be good enough to gain place honours in the Prestbury Plate, and is likely to be our best in the Wolverton Plate.

At Windsor my fancies are:—2.0, Lonely Lady; 2.30, Knight of the Garden; 3.0, Carlino (nap); 3.30, Tango; 4.0, H.W.

LEOPARDSTOWN PROGRAMME

THE PRODUCE STAKES

Sol Speranza Gets the Vote: Golden Toff May Score Again

Tote Double on Fourth and Sixth Races.

Though fields in a couple of the events at Leopardstown this afternoon will be on the small side, the programme should provide some attractive racing. The Mountjoy Lodge stable provides two of the seven runners for the Leopardstown Produce Stakes—namely, The Diamond and Waterproof. The selected of the pair, which will likely be The Diamond, will take a lot of beating, but may not beat Sol Speranza.

Hat Guard has been declared as a runner for both the Glencairn Plate and the Scalp Plate, and in whichever race he runs he must carry a 7lb. penalty. It was a five furlongs race he won at Baldoyle, so he will probably be saddled for the Glencairn Plate, in which his weight will be 9st. 11lb., and he may not be equal to conceding 14lb. to Colquhoun.

Walter's Pride, who put up a good fight with Mulattress at the Phœnix Park last Saturday, looks to have an easy race for the Youngsters' Plate; and Golden Toff won his race last Saturday in such style as to suggest he may defy his penalty in the Scalp Plate.

Athlone Beach has been showing consistently good form this season, and may score another win in the Sugar Loaf Plate. Phœnix Park form may also be a guide for the Bray Plate, in which Eastern Ford looks the best to stand. Selections:—

Glencairn Plate—Colquhoun.
Youngsters' Plate—Walter's Pride.
Scalp Plate—Golden Toff.
Produce Stakes—Sol Speranza.
Sugar Loaf Plate—Athlone Beach.
Bray Plate—Eastern Ford.

Victory over Switzerland in Doubles Match

BY OUR LAWN TENNIS CORRESPONDENT.

WHAT may prove to be the most important match of the three days went to Ireland at Fitzwilliam yesterday.

G. Lyttelton Rogers and T. G. McVeagh (Ireland) beat H. C. Fisher and W. Steiner (Switzerland)—5-7, 6-4, 6-1, 6-4.

Thus Ireland have only to win one of the last two singles matches to-day to qualify for the semi-final of the European Zone of the Davis Cup. After our defeat in the doubles by Sweden, it was a pleasant change to see our pair victorious this time; but they only succeeded after a rather moderate display of tennis.

This time the honours of a doubles match must go to Rogers. He was, as always, most consistent off the ground, but never before has he volleyed so well, and he kept far closer to the net than he usually does, so therefore he was seldom faced with two opponents on top of the net. He was aided in this respect by the fact that Steiner shone far more in defence than in attack, and the defensive policy is not a paying one in the modern doubles game. McVeagh, usually the soundest of low volleyers, was decidedly uncertain in this important branch of the game, while he mistimed his smashes with unusual frequency. Still, despite the latter's patches of really weak play, the aggressive policy of the Irish pair won the day.

FISHER'S SKILL

The most finished doubles player of the four was fisher. He angled his returns of service from the left hand court right away from the man at the net, was exceptionally quick in the bouts of close volleying, and showed fine ability in picking up difficult shots to his feet. Had he had a partner who played the same orthodox game as himself, Switzerland would probably have won yesterday's match, but Steiner simply did not fit in. In some respects he was admirable. He showed remarkable control in picking up smashes from well outside the base-line, and some of his lobbing was well done, but he never followed in after his service to McVeagh, and was far too inclined to hang back from the net. This was the more surprising as he revealed himself to be very quick to put away an overhead smash when he was actually up at the net.

SERVICE WEAKNESS

Neither of the Swiss players had a potent service, a telling point in Ireland's favour. Both men lost a service game in the first and second sets; Fisher lost two and Steiner one in the third, and again in the fourth they were each broken through, which makes a total of nine service games that they lost in the four sets. Steiner had one telling shot from the base-line, a forehand drive down the "tram-lines," but he played it too frequently, and in the end McVeagh was volleying it away for a winner.

Although McVeagh was so erratic, he once again revealed his fine temperament: for he never let his mistakes worry him, invariably playing some brilliant shots after one of his bad patches. He did not seem to be watching the ball as closely as he usually does. Rogers revealed only one weakness—slowness in getting across to cut off returns of McVeagh's service at the net; otherwise he had only one weak spell at the end of the first set.

HOW THE GAMES WENT

That first set looked ominous for Ireland's chances. McVeagh lost his first service game to love, but Ireland struck back so effectively that from 1-3 they took four games in a row to lead 5-3. Fisher gained another game for Switzerland on his own service, but with Rogers's delivery to come Ireland seemed to be "sitting pretty." However, two double faults spelt disaster. Deuce was called, but the Irishmen were unsettled, and a crop of mistakes allowed Switzerland to take the set in the twelfth game.

After losing the first game of the second set on Fisher's service, the Irishmen settled down in determined style, and, controlling the play at the net, ran to 5-1. Then came another bad spell, especially by McVeagh, and again the score was 5-4, and everything depended on Rogers' service. This time they rose to the occasion and took the game to love, McVeagh's quickness in picking up an almost dead net-cord providing an amusing finish to the set.

When Steiner was broken through for the first game of the third set the Irish pair sensed their chance and, applying full pressure, raced away to a 4-love lead and kept a tight grip on the set all through. This was their best period, and the interval appeared to have no unsettling effect on them, for they took Fisher's service to gain a valuable break and a 3-love lead in the fourth set. Steiner won Switzerland's first game, and then followed a desperate struggle on Rogers's service. Eleven times was deuce called before Ireland won out, and three times Rogers came to the rescue with service aces after McVeagh had faltered at the net. Five-two in Ireland's favour looked decisive, but two match points were conceded in the eighth game, and it required two lovely returns of service by Rogers in the tenth to finish off the match.

There is one shot that McVeagh must cultivate if he is to improve his doubles play—the angled smash. Time after time he hit the ball as hard as he could almost to the base line from deep lobs, but Steiner showed masterly skill in retrieveing them, whereas an angled smash would have left both the Swiss players helpless.

BOXING

IRELAND BEATEN 5-3

Hungarian Amateurs' Victory at the Depot

THE visit of the unbeaten Hungarian amateur boxing team drew a crowd of between eight and ten thousand to the Phœnix Park Depot last night for the international tournament with Ireland. The result was a win for Hungary by five contests to three. It was the first defeat at home sustained in almost four years, but the home country representatives were far from disgraced. In fact, we were unlucky not to have drawn, as the Irish light-weight champion and winner of innumerable international contests, Ernie Smith, was not available. His place was taken by Tommy Kelly, who fought the fight of his life, but was beaten by a faster and harder-hitting opponent. There were no outstanding features, apart from Kelly's game display, but it was quite a good night's sport.

CONNOLLY WINS

P. Connolly gave Ireland a good start by outpointing V. Enekes in the fly-weight division. Connolly has lost much of his former speed, but he still retains all his tenacity and aggressiveness. It was not by any means a classic display, for both were inclined to "hang on," while much of the fighting took place at close quarters.

The first round was fairly even, but in the second Connolly tore in and had the better of some rapid exchanges. He clearly shook off his opponent more than once, and might have gained a knock-out at this stage had he shown more accuracy in the timing of his punches Enekes recovered well, but Connolly had a shade the better of the remaining rounds, and was a clever winner.

Ireland became two up when T. Byrne gained a very ready win over A. Olah in the welters. The Hungarian showed speed at the start and a useful straight left, but he found Byrne an awkward opponent, who, in defence, stood back and cleverly countered the Hungarian's leads. Byrne was a clear winner in the first two rounds, and again had the advantage in the third, in which the Hungarian was caused to miss badly, but the latter got in one stinging right to the body towards the end of the session. Olah's only chance lay in gaining a knock-out, and he tried hard to land one in the two closing rounds, but Byrne's defensive tactics proved too much for him.

KERR DEFEATED

The third bout—the bantam contest between Frank Kerr and F. Kubiniyi—brought the visitors their first success, and it was a merited one, though there was very little between them at the finish. At the start Kerr found his opponent an awkward man to hit, and, as the fight went on, there was any amount of clean, crisp punching, with the Hungarian having a shade the better of it generally.

Kerr, with a glorious right to the jaw, forced his man to the boards for a short spell in the third round, but failed to follow up his advantage. However, it was chiefly in defence that the Irishman shone. Time after time he extricated himself from difficult positions, and scored well at close quarters, but the decision in the Hungarian's favour was a fitting result to a lively scrap.

Honours were evened when D. Frigyes gained a comfortable win in the feathers against P. Gernon. Had Gernon shown more enterprise the bout might have been a closer one, but the Irishman allowed his opponent to force the pace from the start, and showed remarkable ineptitude when he had a chance of using his right to effect. He showed more aggression in the last two rounds, but the Hungarian had a commanding lead on points, and though he did not succeed in his efforts to get home a knock-out punch, he always had the verdict in safe keeping.

KELLY'S FINE DISPLAY

It is doubtful if the Leinster champion, T. Kelly, has ever given a better display in his long ring career than in the light-weight bout, in which he deputised for the Irish champion, Ernie Smith, who is injured. His opponent, I. Harangi, has a fine record in internationals, and he showed himself a clever boxer with a powerful punch in either hand. Kelly, however, made him fight every inch of the way, and the result was that the crowd was treated to any amount of lively boxing.

Kelly was splendid in defence, but the Hungarian packed the stronger punch, and this, combined with his greater speed, gained him the decision against a very game and resourceful opponent.

M. Coffey put plenty of weight into his punches against I. Mandi, but the latter showed better judgment generally, and got in plenty of good work to win well.

R. Hearns landed some terrific left-hand punches in his cruiser bout, and seemed to have his opponent out on his feet in the third round, but the Hungarian recovered well and lasted the full journey without ever looking like wiping out the arrears.

Ireland needed a win in the heavy-weight bout to draw, but D. Lydon took a long time to warm to his work, and only for a brief period did he hold out hopes of winning. His opponent, F. Nagy, carried a strong left-hand punch, which he used with effect to win well. Details:—

PROGRAMME REVIEWED

Mr. J. B. Ganly, the international in Rugby football, cricket and tennis, who plays for Phœnix, will lead a team drawn from Ireland, North and South, on Monday and Tuesday against the Dublin University Cricket XI. Trinity have had a good record this season, and there have been some promising additions to their ranks.

The hurling match between Trinity and University College on Monday evening should be a big draw. In other branches of sport the two Universities are keen rivals, and it will be interesting to compare their prowess at the Gaelic game. "National" have a magnificent side, but Trinity are training hard, and are determined to show the Belfield boys that hurling can be played in the College as well as any other sport.

The boxing fixture, with Collins, one of the strongest of the local sides, is certain of popular support, and should provide good fights. Trinity have a sterling record in inter-Varsity championship contests. At present the side includes three title holders and a few ex-inter-Varsity champions will also take the ring. The Stafford-Connolly bout should prove to be the tit-bit, but Doyle and Graham should serve up some excellent boxing

The form displayed by the athletes in the recent inter-University contest suggests that this year's College Races will be of quite exceptional interest.

At the swimming gala Dublin University will be matched against London United Hospitals. The Hospitals' Team includes several outstanding cross-Channel swimmers, and has won the British inter-Varsity championship. Trinity will be ably represented by their own team, which includes Dockrell, Fletcher, Daly, and Daniels.

All the crews are training actively at Islandbridge for the regatta. This year an innovation is being introduced which should do much to popularise rowing. The Boat Club are installing a running commentary apparatus to broadcast details of the races into the enclosure from different parts of the course. It is expected that some Northern crews will compete, in addition to the Dublin clubs.

GAELIC GAMES

HURLING FINAL AT KILLESTER

KILDARE AND MEATH AT MULLINGAR

(BY PAT'O.)

SHOULD Faughs open up the game at Killester Park to-morrow, and decide on quick first-time hitting against the speedy U.C.D. side, a sparkling final is certain. Faughs struck me as being over-confident against Eoghan Rhuas. It was only when they lost the lead in the last quarter that we saw the real resolute Faughs sweeping their way goalwards.

Reckoning U.C.D.'s strength on their semi-final game against Army Metro, their prospects to-morrow are rosy. Fast into their stride and quick to hit, they made last year's champions look slow. Lahiffe, Bresnihan and Hayes treated us to skilful defensive work, and Franklin, the Doon junior, hit scores from all angles. The McCarthy pair and Feeney led up to many flags, and hurling students are comparing this side with the Hogan and Dr. Ryan winning fifteens. There are too many uncertain corners on U.C.D.'s present side, however, to reckon them upsides with the best. Present weather favours their style, and the maximum length of the Killester pitch lends itself to fleetness of foot. The students certainly hold the advantage in that respect, yet they are below Faughs in strength and ashcraft. Faughs have a strong half-line in Gill, Farrell and Egan; and I think U.C.D. will find a difficulty in breaking through it.

Faughs' last line of backs is on the slow side, but I cannot say that the students' front line of forwards is superlative. The re-entrance of McSullivan may prove the decisive factor, though I expect scores to come freely to Faughs from Downes, Donoghue, Devitt and Wade. This should prove a gripping final, with a contrast in styles. U.C.D. shine overhead, while Faughs are the more reliable "ground" hurlers.

Kildare and Meath will travel at full strength to Mullingar. Meath have trained steadfastly, and there is much confidence behind them. Kildare's followers are nonplussed by their changing fortunes. Last Sunday against Louth they could do nothing right; their defence was readily pierced, and when forwards raced away they lacked penetration. The entrance of Frank Dowling (who helped Clans last Sunday) to Kildare's half-line will make a big change, yet Kildare must show quick transformation to win. That is Kildare's way, however, and I shall be disappointed if they do not qualify for the semi-final despite Meath's improved football.

A SHORT-PRICED WINNER

By the Racing Correspondent

MY SELECTION, Tonic Water (by Schweppes out of Happy Thought) proved to be the Best Thing of the Day. He started thirst favourite on the Teetotalisator, and looking through the glasses I could see him nicely placed on the rails. He was soon challenged for the lead by Imitator who, as he was not in the same class, was beaten out of sight. Next time I am on 'the flat' I shall certainly put another tanner on this fine offspring of Schweppes.

Financial News & Notes

DUBLIN RESTRICTED

ALLIANCE GAS HIGHER

B.A.T. ORD. WEAK

The three weeks' account closed on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday in very subdued fashion, and British Industrials were dull, but locally a fairly steady tone prevailed despite the lack of public interest.

Among Free State Funds Conversion Loan improved to 109½, and other issues held steady. British Funds declined and Dublin 3½ p.c. 1955-80 lost 10s.

Banks tended lower and Munster and Leinsters fell several pence.

Guinness opened dull, but later recovered to 156s.

In Rails Great Northern Ord. improved to 16½.

Alliance Gas Ord. came into demand and improved to 16 11/16.

Associated Chocolate Deb. moved up to 10½ and Burke Pref. rose 2s. Dublin Brick Ord. added 1s. and Ever Ready (Ireland) hardened to 13s. 3d., but Cement Deb. eased to 1 discount.

B.A.T. Ord. relapsed to 120s. 7½d., Courtaulds drooped to 49s. 9d., and Coats Ord. eased slightly. Unilever Ord. and Vickers inclined higher, but Imperial Chemicals gave way to 38s. 7½d.

LONDON SUBDUED

JAPANESE BONDS DECLINE

Although the latest news from France was regarded rather more hopefully, the London Stock markets yesterday wound up the long account in subdued fashion. Operators in most groups displayed a disposition to await clarification of the Continental situation before entering into fresh commitments, and much of the business transacted resulted from further sales. The trading was on an extremely limited scale, however, and although the tendency of prices continued against holders, a slightly steadier tendency developed during the closing stages and comparatively few significant losses occurred.

BRITISH FUNDS.

Gilt-edged Securities were again offered at the outset, on the belief that repatriation of funds by foreign holders will adversely affect this market at some future date, but the appearance of a few buyers at the lower levels imparted a firmer tone and quotations rallied. Old Consols and Local Loans both finished ⅛ to the good, while War Loan and one or two others, although lower on balance, were above the worst levels.

FOREIGN BONDS.

Foreign Bonds presented a slightly better appearance than of late, though further losses were shown in Chinese issues, and Japanese Bonds fell back on the news that Canton has declared war on Japan. In the European group, French Fours and Portuguese Threes strengthened, and Germans were mostly harder. South Americans moved narrowly and closed steady.

RAILS.

British Rails continued under the influence of the uncertain labour position, and a modest amount of selling was sufficient to turn the market dull and cause fresh losses in L.M.S. Ord. and Southerns. Foreign Rails, apart from shrinkages in certain Argentine and San Paul Ord., were quietly steady, and Colonials held up well, but American Rails again moved against holders.

INDUSTRIALS.

End of account realisation was the dominant factor in the Industrial market, and many issues went back sharply at first. When the selling had been completed the general tendency became steadier, and numerous issues regained part of initial losses. Nevertheless, most groups finished dull, and falls were common in the Iron and Steel, Aircraft, Tobacco, and Electrical Equipment departments. Transatlantics, despite a late recovery in late dealings, also closed lower.

MINES.

The Mining market, in common with other sections, opened dull, but renewed support was accorded, Kaffirs and Randfontein, Venterposts, and several others, eventually showed advances. Interests in other Gold shares was negligible, and prices were depressed by persistent sales.

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS

The Outlook Reviewed

One of the leading firms of jobbers in the London Industrial market, in their weekly review, remarks that leaving out questions of high taxation and foreign politics, the outlook is not discouraging. Annual reports of manufacturing and trading companies present a cheerful record of increased profits, and in many cases of increased dividends, while for reasons enumerated on a previous occasion, including the strengthening of the defence forces, only something of a very untoward nature will prevent a continuance of industrial activity in this country for a considerable time to come. It is a reasonable assumption therefore that future profits as a whole will be satisfactory to Ordinary shareholders. The reduction of about £457,000 in the net profits of J. and P. Coats, which involved the non-repetition of the previous cash bonus of 3¾ per cent., came admittedly as a shock; while it provided a reminder that companies which largely depend upon foreign business are still hampered by exchange restrictions, quotas and the like.

Great Southern Railways

The transfer books of the Four per Cent. Debenture stock and Four per Cent. City of Dublin Junction Railways Debenture Stocks, 1884 and 1887, and 1894 and 1897 will be closed from Tuesday, 16th June, to Monday, 6th July, both days inclusive.

A Dividend Doubled

In the year ended March 31, 1935, the Electric Construction Co., which makes electric lighting and traction machinery, experienced a considerable recovery; for a loss of fully £14,000 in the preceding year was turned into a net profit of £18,337, after tax. It was possible, therefore, to resume Ordinary dividends with a payment of 3½ per cent., after four years during which shareholders had received nothing. For the year to March 31 last a dividend is now announced of 7 per cent. on the Ordinary shares, from which it may be assumed that the recovery has made further progress. This undertaking has the advantage of quite a modest capital, the issued amount being £362,780 only, of which £300,000 represents Ordinary, and the balance 7 per cent. Cumulative Preference shares, all of £1 each. At one time last year the Ord. shares dipped to 14s., but the present price is 36s. 3d. At this figure the yield from the 7 per cent. dividend is less than 4 per cent., but the price is probably justified by the prospect of a still larger distribution in the future.

LONDON "STREET" MARKET

The quietness that has prevailed in the "street" market throughout the week was again in evidence last evening. The tone as a whole was dull, but movements were not extensive. Among Internationals, Nickels receded ¼ to 45⅞; Steels lost ½ to 58½, and Radios finished ½ lower at 11. Hydros eased to 7; Tractions were a shade off at 11 7/16, and Anacondas were mentioned at 6¼. "Canadas" held at 12 7/16, while New York Centrals were offered at 33¾. In the Oil section Mexican Eagles gave way to 23s. 6d., and Canadians weakened to 15s. 6d.

The Earl of Athlone has been promoted to the command of the Life Guards, in succession to the late Field-Marshal Viscount Allenby.

THE INDUSTRIAL MARKET

UNCERTAIN GENERAL TONE

There was evidence of a further closing down of "bull" positions in the Industrial market yesterday, and in consequence the general tone continued dull and uncertain.

Cable and Wireless Stocks had a somewhat steadier appearance, with bear covering in progress, the "A" Ord. recovering ¾ and the "B" Ord. ⅛.

AVIATIONS DULL.

With only a few exceptions, Aviation and kindred descriptions remained dull. Bristols continued on offer and declined 1s. 3d. Hawker Siddeley Ord. and Prefs. were quoted ex the rights to the new issue, finishing at 25s. 3d. and 21s. 6d. respectively. The new Ords. closed around 4s. premium and the new Prefs. around 9d. premium.

In the Drapery and Department Stores section Marks and Spencer were quoted at 4 7/16 ex share bonus, being slightly lower on balance. The "A" were dealt in at 4 7/16 and the new "A" changed hands on a similar basis. Woolworths eased a little.

UNILEVERS BETTER.

There was not a great deal of business among Provision and Catering issues. Unilever recovered to 33s. 4½d. and the N.V. to 37s. 3d.

Among Textiles, J. and P. Coats recovered slightly to 53s. 7½d., while Fine Spinners hardened to 6s. 3d. In the Rayon group Courtaulds lost further ground to 49s. 10½d., while British Celanese gave way to 11s. 4½d. Celanese of America were ⅛ lower.

B.A.T. WEAK.

Tobaccos were subject to further scattered sales. "Bats" reflected the disturbing news from the Far East and closed 3/16 lower at 6 1/16. Gallahers lost 1/16 at 6 11/16, and similar declines were recorded by "Imps" and United Souths.

An easier tone was again apparent in the Miscellaneous section, although few serious losses occurred. Henry Meadows met with a fair amount of profit-taking and changed hands down to 6.

OILS QUIET

Quiet conditions again prevailed in the Oil Share Market yesterday, and although a steady to firm tone existed at the start it was only in a few cases that initial gains were held. As a matter of fact, the volume of transactions showed little, if any, improvement on that of the preceding day. The Eagle issues were an erratic market, for although firmness was displayed at the start prices reacted later, losses being recorded in both cases.

RUBBERS DULL

The downward movement in quotations for Rubber shares continued yesterday, and dull conditions characterised the market through the session, owing to persistent selling on public account. Quiet business was effected in the commodity section, with spot rubber selling at 7½d. per lb. U.K. rubber stocks are estimated to have been reduced by 1,300 tons during the past week.

PARIS, Friday.

A wave of optimism swept over the Paris Bourse this morning following the formation of M. Blum's Cabinet, and the recovery was further stimulated by the new Premier's broadcast to the strikers.

The drain of gold from the Bank of France, however, does not seem to have abated to-day.

The Stock market closed very firm, with rentes showing an average gain of 2 points, while the Bank of France shares appreciated by about 325 francs.

On the Money Market the franc remained steady around 75.39.

It is impossible to give the exact figures of the amount of gold which left the Bank of France to-day, but it is generally estimated to have been much the same as yesterday—about 500,000,000 francs (about £7,000,000). This means that a total of nearly £20,000,000 has left the bank within the last three days.

LONDON MINING MARKET

KAFFIRS DISPLAY HESITANCY

With the carry-over in progress, and the end of an unpopular long account approaching, to say nothing of the usual week-end slackness of markets, it was not surprising to find the Mining departments in a state of quietude yesterday. The flight from the franc exercised a depressing influence, and offerings from Paris found but little response, so that nearly all the usually active counters registered declines. An exception was provided by Central Mining, a good demand for which lifted the price smartly. East Rand Props. relapsed on profit-taking, but Randfontein continued to forge ahead in anticipation of better results under the new taxation regulations. The market, as a whole, presented a fairly steady appearance at the close. There was little business passing in Rhodesians, and end-account realisations left prices mostly lower on the day. Chartered, however, held their ground.

Diamonds were easier inclined.

West Africans generally failed to shake off their apathy. Business in Australians was also at a very low ebb, and in the almost entire absence of demand prices were allowed to drift.

Although the price of the metal marked a sharp recovery, the Tin shares market remained dull, the uncertainty of the outlook causing further realisations. Closing prices:—

THE MONEY MARKET

BIG RISE IN TREASURY BILL RATE

Applications for £50,000,000 Treasury Bills were received at the Bank of England yesterday. Tenders, dated Monday to Friday of next week at £98 16s. 3d., receive about 53 per cent., above in full. Tenders dated Saturday at £99 16s. 4d. and above receive in full. The average rate indicated is about 15s. per cent., compared with 11s. 5.54d. per cent. for last week's bills.

Gold was fixed 3d. higher yesterday at 138s. 6½d. per fine oz. This included a premium of 3d. over the dollar at 5.42¾ and 10¼d. over the franc at 76 11/16. About £241,000 was disposed of in the market.

Silver remained at 19 11/16d. per oz. for both spot and forward delivery.

As a result of the higher Treasury Bill rate, coupled with the banks refraining from buying bills in the market, discount rates advanced sharply in Lombard Street. Two months' bills, which are not a convenient maturity, were called ⅞ per cent., as no one wanted them, while the rate for fine three months' paper was advanced to ¾ per cent. Short loans were in good supply at ½ per cent.

FOREIGN EXCHANGES.

The flight from the gold currencies was slowing down yesterday. Considerable uncertainty as to the future of the franc prevailed both before and after M. Blum's broadcast speech, but fears that steps will be taken to restrict the export of capital possible, even involving retrogressive measures, appeared to have arrested pressure on the spot exchange. Indeed, after a rather severe set-back in the initial dealings the franc made steady headway in relation to the £, actually closing with a small net improvement on the day. Some support was provided by the operations of the American authorities in the Paris market, while there was also a suggestion of official support from London in the initial dealings, though, judging by the state of the market this must have been very slight. Forward rates for the franc continued to reflect the prevailing anxiety, but even here there was a marked improvement before the close of the day. Of the other European gold currencies the Swiss franc was still very depressed, the Zurich-Paris exchange being at gold point to the French centre. The guilder, however, though still moving in line with the franc, enjoyed some relaxation from the recent selling pressure.

THE MILK WAR

DONEGAL APPEALS

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

DERRY, Friday.

Nine appeals by County Donegal milk vendors against the decision of the Derry magistrates in convicting them of selling milk in Northern Ireland without a licence, as required under the Northern Milk Act, 1934, were mentioned at Derry Crown Sessions to-day before His Honour Judge Osborne, K.C.

Mr. John ff. Young, Crown Solicitor, said that the appeals had been adjourned pending the decision of the House of Lords, and, as far as he knew, that decision had not been given yet.

The Judge further adjourned the appeals to the October Crown Sessions.

Under the Northern Milk Act the Free State vendors are excluded, and they are testing their claim to sell in Northern Ireland through the Courts, their case being that the Act is an interference with trade between Northern Ireland and the Free State, and is, therefore, ultra vires. The Northern Government's reply is that, as the Free State dairies are outside their jurisdiction and not subject to inspection, they cannot grant licences to Free State vendors. Since the passing of the Act in 1934 the Donegal vendors have continued to sell in Derry, pending a final decision of their case.

THE DUNGARVAN MURDER

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

WATERFORD, Friday.

"We pray that God will forgive the murderers." Thus wrote the parents of John Egan, Mitchel street, Dungarvan, victim of the recent shooting outrage in that town, in a letter to the Waterford Corporation thanking them for a resolution of sympathy. The Most Rev. Dr. Kinnane, Bishop of Waterford and Lismore, who also sent an acknowledgment, stated that such a resolution from an important and representative body like the Corporation must have great influence in moulding public opinion on proper lines, and in removing the glamour with which crimes of this kind, and pseudo-patriotic societies responsible for them, seem to be invested in the eyes of some of our young people.

John Fiorenza, found guilty last week of the murder of Mrs. Nancy Titterton, wife of an English official of the National Broadcasting Co., was yesterday in New York sentenced to electrocution at Sing-Sing Prison during the week beginning July 13th.

CHILDREN RESCUED FROM DROWNING

Phelim and Monica Whelan, aged respectively 9 and 4 years, of 4 Temple street, Dublin, were saved from drowning in Curly's Hole, Dollymount, Dublin, yesterday afternoon by Mr. Joseph Graham, of St. Declan's road, Dublin.

The children were paddling near the hole, which has been the scene of many drowning accidents, when one of them slipped and pulled the other into the water. When Mr. Graham took the children out of the water they were semi-conscious. Artificial respiration revived them, however, and they were taken to the Children's Hospital, Temple street. Both were released after treatment.

Miss Jane McCarthy, of 5 St. John's terrace, Cork, who died on 21st May last, left personal estate in England and the Irish Free State valued at £2,335.

THE AMERICAN MARKETS

IRREGULAR TREND ON STOCK MARKET

From Reuter's Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Friday.

The spreading strikes in France and Spain and the talk of war in the Far East tended to chill sentiment on the Stock Exchange to-day. At the same time guesses were many and varied regarding the effects of the possible devaluation of the franc and the repatriation of funds on American Securities. The turnover was again very small, with only 630,000 shares changing hands. The opening was steady. Moderate advances in the early dealings attracted renewed selling, as a result of which the market turned fractionally irregular. Support reappeared here and there in the late dealings, but the close was irregular. Losses of 1 to 2 points were shown by Columbian Carbon, U.S. Smelting, Liggett and Myers, Crucible Steel, and Johns-Manville. Gains, ranging to a point, were recorded by the Tobacco group and Western Union, while a 2-point gain was registered by Twentieth Century Fox Films and Air Reduction.

Call money was unchanged at 1 per cent., and the outside rate was unaltered at ¾ to 1 per cent. Prime paper was quoted at ¾ to 1 per cent. Jail for Uninsured Drivers.—Very soon he would make it a rule that the ordinary penalty would be jail for a man who drove an uninsured car, said District Justice MacCabe at Waterford when he fined Ronald McCullagh, Abbey House, Ferrybank, Waterford, £5, and Thomas McEvoy, Mullinavat, £2 for this offence. The Justice said that he could not imagine a more serious danger to the public than uninsured drivers, and though it was not part of his duty to criticise other courts, he was amazed to see fines inflicted all over the country for this offence. The Act was passed for the purpose of protecting ordinary members of the public, and that Court existed to see that the rights of the public would not be infringed.

LEINSTER HOLD A GOOD LEAD

ULSTER BATTING LACKS DISTINCTION

Leinster, who have not won a match against Ulster since 1924, look like breaking the spell to-day. As the outcome of yesterday's play they are in a very strong position. Ulster, who batted first, were dismissed in one and a half hours for 70; and Leinster, batting for two and three-quarter hours, replied with 168 for 8 wickets. Thus, the home province, with two wickets in hands, hold a lead of 98.

There was nothing of note in the Ulster batting. D. R. McKibbon, who made top score, was batting an hour for his 19, and J. G. Cook, who went in second wicket down, was at the wickets one hour and ten minutes, and was not out with 17. G. A. Crothers gave a bright display, and was only twelve minutes at the wickets for 15 runs. J. R. Graham and J. C. Boucher carried off the bowling honours. The former, sending down nine overs, took five wickets at a cost of three runs apiece; and Boucher, who bowled eleven overs, had 4 wickets for 26.

A feature of the Leinster innings was the stand by J. R. Gill and F. M. Quinn in support of the fifth wicket. Coming together with the score at 69, they defied several changes in the attack, and added 92, in one and a half hours. Gill batted steadily for his 29; and Quinn, who got 80, played a perfect innings. He made his runs all round the wicket, and but for a very difficult chance when 32 his display was without blemish. His hits included nine boundaries. C. W. Billingsley has so far proved the most successful of the Northern bowlers.

A resumption will be made this morning at 11 o'clock.

Midland Breeders' Foal Plate, Birmingham—Surf Girl, Option.

Plassy, who was considered to be England's chief hope against the U.S.A. invader, Omaha, is a doubtful runner for the Ascot Gold Cup, to be run on June 18. Mr. Colledge Leader, the colt's trainer, stated yesterday that he anticipated that Lord Stanley's Quashed would be his representative. Apart from his Gold Cup engagement, Plassy is also entered for the Churchill Stakes and the Hardwicke Stakes. He will probably run in the latter.

THE GARDA WEEK GAMES

HANDBALL FINAL LASTS TWO HOURS

F. Healy put up a great display yesterday in the final of the Garda Intermediate S.B. Championship, in which he beat S. Ormsby by 21-10, 14-21, 17-21, 21-8, 21-10. The match extended over two hours.

In the Senior H.B. semi-final P. Perry, the S.B. champion, entered the final, beating J. McGrath by 21-9, 21-9, 21-7.

Among the spectators were the Hungarian boxing team.

YACHTING

TO-DAY'S ARRANGEMENTS

The 21-Footers will race under R.A.Y.C. auspices this afternoon, their first gun being timed for 2.55 p.m.

All other races will be under the flag of the D.B.S.C. It will be interesting to see how many 17-Footers will turn out, the Valerie Cup being sailed for to-day. The handicap (for club prize) is much evidence of how little this class has done so far (even if there were fine racing on Thursday evening), it being: Eileen receives one minute from each of the others.

The Unclassified Boats are as they were last week, except that Mavis is back on her moorings, and probably will be a starter to-day in the Section 2 division, for which the handicap is: Punctilio (scr.) allows Mavis and Nepenthe 7 minutes; Norah and Acushla 9 minutes; Klysma 12 minutes; Peggy Bawn, Ainmara and Sonia 15 minutes; Failthe 25 minutes.

The handicap for the Section 2 division is: Bonita (scr.) allows Mercia III. 2 minutes; Alethea 5 minutes; Venture 10 minutes; Amy, Delphis, Iolar, Realt, Irene, Pelican 15 minutes. Should the "alternative" course be sailed, these handicaps will be reduced by one-half.

The handicap for the Wags is: Phyllis and Coquette (scr.) allows Margaret, Blue Bird, Kittiwake and Saryalis 2 minutes; all others 1 minute.

BELFAST MUSICAL COMPETITIONS

SUCCESS OF THIS YEAR'S FESTIVAL

The Belfast Musical Festival of 1936 was a great success financially and otherwise. As the annual report presented to members on the 4th May, states, the Festival was held in the Assembly Buildings, and the entries, standard and public support showed an improvement. The total entries numbered 1,280, which included 229 for vocal solo, 342 for piano classes, and 473 for verse speaking.

The entries from senior choirs showed a distinct improvement, but the committee would welcome still further entries from such choirs.

It might be of interest to quote from Mr. Maurice Jacobson's report on the Festival with regard to the Keith Memorial Cup for choral singing:—"Few festivals could boast such a trophy, and it would be difficult to conceive a more fascinating competition. The winning choir—Kirkpatrick Memorial Church Choir—put up a splendid performance, and all the other choirs did excellent—a defeat with honour, indeed! This trophy may well be termed 'the Blue Riband of North of Ireland choralism.'"

The entries for the strings classes were most disappointing. The adjudications in this particular section are excellent, and the Committee hopes that they will be the means of inducing further entries next year for this most important section.

The Committee have again booked the Assembly Hall for the 1937 competitions. The dates for next year's Festival are from Tuesday, 2nd March, until Saturday, 13th March. Owing to the great satisfaction which the 1936 adjudicators gave both entrants and audience the Committee have decided to retain their services for 1937.

Regret was expressed at the death of Mrs. James Harper, M.B.E., who had been for twenty-five years connected with the Belfast musical competitions and had acted as hon. secretary from its early days; and also at the death of Mr. Fred. Moffett, one of the founders of these competitions.

The election of officers for the Oxford Union Society for the Trinity term was announced last night. The new President will be Mr. J. A. Brown, of Baliol, a Liberal, who comes from Belfast.
